Republicans Open Fight On Control Proposals

Taft Tells Senate Administration Plan Grants 'Arbitrary, Dictatorial Powers'

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Republican opposition to President Truman's proposed economic control program began to crystallize in Congress yesterday as hearings opened on legislation requested by the Administration.

In a Senate speech, Senator Taft (R., Ohio)—looked to as the minority party's economic oracle—assailed the Administration's control bill as granting "unnecessary . . . arbitrary and dictatorial powers over industry."

His views were echoed, by implication if not in so many words, by Republican members of the Banking and Currency Committees of both the House and Senate. They heard testimony from W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board. He appeared as first witness in favor of the President's request for broad materials allocation and credit restriction powers.

Bricker, Capehart Concerned

In the Senate committee, Senators Bricker (R., Ohio) and Capehart (R., Ind.) expressed concern that the legislation would give the President the power to take over all American industry if he chose and that the necessity for such extensive control authority was not apparent.

Similarly, in the House committee, Representative Wolcott (Mich.), ranking GOP member, demanded that Symington make out a prima facie case that the authority was needed. He contended that through legislation already on the books and through his other powers, as yet unexercised, the President could accomplish all he wanted to do.

In his speech to the Senate, Taft contended that the proposed legislation went much farther than the President's message to Congress, and that it contained more sweeping powers than were granted the Chief Executive even in World War II.

He made the acid comment that the only controls not requested by the President were the unpopular ones of price control and consumer rationing, and that Mr. Truman proposed deferring the levy.

Bill to Restore Postoffice Cuts Out of Committee

A bill to restore the cuts made in postal service was forced out of a House committee pigeonhole yesterday. The action clears the way for a House vote on August 14.

The House Postoffice Committee has not acted on the bill, which would direct restoration of postal service cutbacks ordered last April by Postmaster General Donaldson.

The 218th member—a clear House majority—yesterday signed a petition to discharge the bill from the committee, clearing the way for a House vote.

Brother Missing in Action, D. C. Boy Asks Korea Service

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

"I thought I'd go over there and see what I could do to even the score," said a black-haired youth, in a voice so quiet it was hard to catch his words.

The scene was the main Army-Air Force Recruiting Station at Arlington Farms yesterday, and the youth was about to go through his physical exam.

"I'm asking for the infantry, and I want to get to Korea, sir," he told Air Force Lieut. Donald L. Knott, the processing officer.

Then the story came out.

The youth was Norman E. Robey, 19, brother of 21-year-old Pfc. Robert V. Robey, the GI who refused to be discharged from the Army after his unit was strafed by the Reds in Korea. Last week, he was reported missing over there.

Robert was an infantryman, too.

Bashfully answering a reporter's questions, Norman said softly:

"Me and my brother were always pretty tight, if you know what I mean. We both lived with my sister, and spent weekends with my mother. We went to baseball games and football games together. We both went to the same school, Stuart Junior High, though not at the same time. Anyway, we were always pretty much together."

Robert had worked as a plumber's helper after graduating from Stuart Junior High in the District, until he enlisted on October 31, 1947. Norman was still in school.

"I'd been thinking of enlisting anyway, ever since he did. The family didn't think much of the idea, but then when this happened to my brother, I figured this was the same thing for me if I was missing."

The Robey family—the boys sister, Mrs. Florence Riley, now of 1732 L st. ne., and their mother, Mrs. Vanlear Robey of Cottage City, Md.—haven't given up hope that Robert will be found, his brother said. Four other sisters live with Mrs. Robey.

2 or 3 Carriers, 4 Cruisers, 5 or 6 Subs, Destroyers To Be Activated

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Navy will add two score combat vessels and dozens of supporting craft to its active fleet under the 10-billion-dollar expansion of the armed forces, congressional circles said last night.

Two to three aircraft carriers, about four cruisers, some 30 destroyers, five to six submarines and a number of amphibious vessels will strengthen the forces afloat, these sources indicated. Most of them will come out of the mothball fleet.

The Congressmen, who asked that they not be quoted by name, gave the estimate of the naval expansion program after the House Armed Services Committee heard Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, chief of naval operations, testify on the plan behind closed doors.

Details Due Thursday

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) withheld any statement on the program or Admiral Sherman's testimony after the session. He said the committee will release details on the new manpower ceilings and the ships and other forces to be activated on Thursday, after Army and Air Force chiefs outline their expansion plans.

Today, his group will go to the Pentagon with the Senate Armed Services Committee for a secret "briefing" session on the war and the planned buildup. On Wednesday, Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff, will go before Vinson's committee, and Thursday, Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, and Army Secretary Frank Pace, jr., will be heard.

The Congressmen said the Marine Corps will get the biggest proportionate boost in manpower—a 60-percent expansion from its current 75,000-man total or about 40,000 additional men. The Navy will add 200,000 officers and men to its present 380,000, they declared.

Army, Air Force Quotas

As President Truman announced last night that the armed forces would be upped by about 600,000, this would mean about 340,000 more men for the Army and Air Force. Spokesmen have said the Army will increase to just short of its 837,000-man ceiling and the Air Force will go substantially over its 502,000-men limit.

From the budget estimates made public by the President and the information given out by the Congressmen, it was plain that the bulk of the Navy money is going for increased operating forces rather than new equipment.

Congressmen said it is expected two Essex-type flat-tops will be added to the seven attack carriers now in service—one from the mothball fleet and one now undergoing modernization. A new carrier of about the same size is expected to be finished late this year. The question of whether two to three such craft will be put in service during fiscal 1951 apparently depends upon the completion date of the new carrier and that of the modernization of the old USS Essex.

Members of the House committee expressed some surprise at the Program to Care For Korea Needs And Restrain New Aggression

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman late yesterday asked Congress for funds to expand the armed forces of the United States by 600,000 men and to procure additional aircraft, tanks, guns and ships.

He asked for a supplemental appropriation of $10,486,976,000, nearly a half-billion more than the figure he mentioned in his historic message last week.

The Chief Executive said the purpose of the new budget estimates was to prosecute the fighting in Korea and to build up American forces "to a state of readiness designed to deter further acts of aggression."

In addition to the $10,486,976,000, he asked Congress for an extra 20 million dollars for Selective Service and 10 million for the President's Emergency Fund.

Forces Up 40 Percent

With the addition of 600,000 men, the Army, Navy and Air Force would be expanded by more than 40 percent and would have a total manpower strength of about 2,100,000.

This would be nearly 100,000 over the present statutory ceiling, which is 2,005,882. President Truman has asked Congress to lift the ceiling, making possible an unlimited expansion.

The biggest item in the estimates Mr. Truman sent to Capitol Hill—$3,344,600,000—was for aircraft, and the next biggest—$2,646,000,000—was for tanks, guns and other major procurement.

The budget estimate, which is supplemental to the Department of Defense appropriation for the fiscal year 1951, is divided as follows:

Army	$3,063,000,000
Navy, Marine Corps	2,648,000,000
Air Force	4,535,000,000
Establishment-wide activities	240,000,000

In a letter to House Speaker Rayburn that accompanied the request for additional funds, President Truman said:

"The purpose of these proposed estimates is two-fold: first, to meet the immediate situation in Korea, and, second, to provide for an early, but orderly, build-up of our military forces to a state of readiness designed to deter further acts of aggression.

"The additional requirements for Korea provided for in these estimates are urgently needed and will receive the first priority in the execution of the programs herein.

"This situation is still fluid, however (and) in the course of the year it may be neccessary to make some program changes.

Adjustment Authority

"For this reason I am requesting authority to adjust by 10 percent any single appropriation by transfer from other appropriations. This will also permit any desirable adjustments in the second or build-up phase contemplated by these estimates.

"With respect to this latter part of the requirement, it is my intention that the expansion of the forces will be done in an orderly, efficient and economical manner.

Yanks 'Holding Their Own' After One U. S. Unit Is Forced Back

BULLETIN

United States Eighth Army Headquarters, in Korea (Tuesday), July 25 (AP).—A Korean Communist force occupied Haenam at the southwest tip of Korea Monday night, completing a sweep of the peninsula's west coast.

Tokyo (Tuesday), July 25 (AP).—North Korean forces drove into Yongdong last night, but American defenders of the vital rail and highway town were reported "holding their own" today.

The Communist push into the town 20 air miles southeast of Red-held Taejon was the hammer blow along a jagged 150-mile front where United States and South Korean lines were under heavy pressure. On the west coast the Reds had knifed almost to the southwest tip of Korea.

Sketchy field dispatches said North Korean infantry fought into Yongdong after one American element was forced to withdraw from positions west of the Taejon-Yongdong highway. Presumably the battle was raging at close quarters inside the town but field reports spoke only of continuing fighting "in the area." Another front line United States unit was reported pressed on two sides by Red infantry.

Reds Pounding U. S. Rear

North Korean artillery and mortar fire was pounding the rear of American forward elements, reported Associated Press Correspondent Q. H. P. King from the front. There was no indication whether U. S. troops still held eight miles along the rail and highway routes to the northwest of Yongdong.

King quoted Maj. Gen. Hobart R. Gay, the First Calvary Division commanding general, as saying a steady stream of refugees was hampering operations in the area.

"Refugees are used by the enemy to his advantage," Gay added.

An aide reported that two small boys, one 13 and the other 14, were caught yesterday behind American lines signalling with mirrors.

He said the youngsters were flashing signals to warn Red artillery positions of approaching American observation planes, so the Communists could hide their positions.

Apparently the Reds had tanks hidden in nearby hills and were using high velocity tank guns as artillery.

Allied Line Caves at Yongju

The Allied line also gave ground at Yongju, 50 miles inland from the east coast. General MacArthur's communique early Tuesday morning said a South Korean division withdrew to more defensible positions two miles south of the town.

Yongju is the active tip of the front between the shattered east coast town of Yongdok—now under United States naval gunfire—and the mountain town of Yechon, which a Negro regiment of the

Brannan Asks Help in Giving Away Surplus

Repackaging of Food, Prepaying of Freight Proposed to Congress

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan yesterday asked Congress to help him get rid of millions of pounds of perishable food it has forced him to buy under the farm price support program.

Brannan's appeal to the House Agriculture Committee, accompanied by a report of how the Government has tried in vain to give away huge amounts of milk, butter, eggs, cheese and other foods, sounded ironic in view of the last fortnight's daily stampedes by housewives to lay in food at nearly any price.

Brannan said domestic and even foreign welfare, charitable and public institutions refuse to come and get the stuff. They won't even take it if it is delivered free of charge in bulk lots. In order to induce them to take it off the Government's hands, the committee is considering this two-fold 50 million dollar proposition:

1. To pay the freight to each state or foreign country that will take it off our hands.

2. To spend millions more to repackage it, to make it more attractive to those to whom Uncle Sam hopes to donate it; and also to make it easier for them to distribute.

Brannan said that CARE had suggested it might in some cases get recipient foreign countries to send ships to haul the foodstuffs away.

Here's what Brannan told the committee in a session that was outstanding for the unusually friendly relations between the witness and committee members:

"There are a number of reasons why we are not reaching more of

Tax Makers Alerted for Stop-Gap Hike

Snyder Says Speedy Request Is Likely; Leaders Are 'Willing'

Congressional leaders yesterday were asked to stand by for a "stop-gap" tax bill quickly increasing levies on corporations and individuals by a still undetermined amount.

The proposed emergency revenue measure was still in the talk stage yesterday but Treasury Secretary John Snyder told congressional tax makers he thinks the Administration will speedily give the go-ahead.

House Ways and Means Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.) and Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) indicated they were willing, following a luncheon conference with Snyder.

"Evidently we are expected to do something now, and I think we ought to do something," said Doughton.

George said he told Snyder his Finance Committee would consider any tax recommendations the Administration may make. The Georgian suggested the House-passed excise tax-cut bill, with virtually all excise-reductions eliminated, be used as a vehicle to speed any interim tax increase decided on.

Both Beorge and Doughton opposed any "retroactive" taxation, however, and urged excess profits taxation be left out of the stop-gap measure. George said he thinks the emergency measure should be confined pretty much to a flat percentage increase in both individual and corporation taxes.

The tipoff that the Administration was considering a quick tax bill came from Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.), following a White House legislative conference.

Rayburn said Congress might be asked to put through an "immediate bill" lifting income taxes, but leaving development of a long-

Truman Alerts Nation Against Spy, Saboteur

Calls on Americans To Report Evidence Of Action to FBI

President Truman yesterday alerted the Nation against spies and sabotage. He called on Americans to report promptly to the FBI any evidence of subversive activities.

The President said in a statement that it is essential that investigations of those and related matters be conducted on a national basis "and all information carefully sifted out and correlated in order to avoid confusion."

The text of Mr. Truman's statement:

"On September 6, 1939, and January 8, 1943, a presidential directive was issued providing that the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice should take charge of investigative work in matters relating to espionage, sabotage, subversive activities and related matters.

"It was pointed out that the investigations must be conducted in a comprehensive manner on a national basis and all information carefully sifted out and correlated in order to avoid confusion.

"I should like to again call the attention of all enforcement officers, both Federal and State, to the request that they report all information in the above enumerated fields promptly to the nearest field representative of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which is charged with the responsibility of correlating this material and referring matters which are under the jurisdiction of any other Federal agency with responsibilities in this field to the appropriate agency.

"I suggest that all patriotic organizations and individuals likewise report all such information relating to espionage, sabotage and subversive activities to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in the same manner."

U.S. Navy Guns Pound Enemy At Yongdok

Heavy Shells Catch Tanks, Infantry and Supply Concentrations

Tokyo (Tuesday) July 25 (AP).—American naval units fired 428 rounds of heavy shells into the blasted ruins of Yongdok today and reported the bombardment caught Red tanks, infantry and supply concentrations.

Yongdok, seized by American and South Korean forces Friday, was retaken by the North Koreans the next day. It is on Korea's east coast, 25 miles north of the American beachhead of Pohang—where the First Cavalry Division went ashore.

Naval gunfire which preceded American capture of Yongdok reduced the town to rubble.

An official announcement said today's bombardment, directed by ground force and aerial spotting, inflicted "heavy casualties" on enemy forces in the mountains southeast of Yongdok.

The announcement continued: "Results . . . can best be estimated by the following message received from a ground force shore control party:

"'Fire on enemy personnel in large numbers in mountains southeast of Yongdok inflicted heavy casualties. Best day yet. Interrogated a prisoner who stated your artillery is hell. Every time you fire you kill or wound many soldiers.'"

The announcement said a French gunboat, previously reported as joining the blockade of Korea, would join the Allied naval forces off the coast within a few days.

Coast Guard to Do Policing

Unions Agree on Pact to Keep Subversives Off Ship Crews

A security system for barring Communists and subversives from American ships was agreed upon yesterday by management and unions of the maritime industry.

Under a voluntary pact, worked out under the guidance of Federal officials, the Coast Guard will be in charge of the actual policing.

Absent from the meeting and uninvited were elements of the left wing CIO Longshoremen's Union, headed by Harry Bridges, together with the left-wing CIO Cooks and Stewards Union.

The statement of maritime policy issued by management and union officials attending said:

"We recognize that certain men, because of being known as Communist Party card carriers, subversives or who are notorious as consistently carrying out policies of the Communist Party will be classified as bad security risks by the military or proper Government authorities."

The ship operators and workers, representing all coasts and sections of the country pledged that "no ship will be delayed because any such men are rejected" as bad security risks.

Some 75 persons sat in on the meeting which drafted the statement. It was called by Secretary of Labor Tobin and Secretary of Commerce Sawyer.

Tobin said some Communists and subversives have sailed on our ships, but he is confident that only loyal Americans will be found in the crews in a short time.

He explained that the Coast Guard already is taking steps, with the help of the FBI and Office of Naval Intelligence to spot Communist and subversive seamen.

Capt. H. T. Jewell, Coast Guard representative at the conference, said the policing system should be operating within a week.

Tobin said that as a crew signs on each ship there will be a Coast Guard representative there to check them.

The unions agreed to furnish a replacement for any man rejected as a security risk. But either the union or the employe affected will have the right of appeal.

The agreement provides that nobody is to be listed as a bad security risk because of union activities.

Wanted Her 'To Stop Crying'

Arlington Painter, 22, Jailed In Beating of Baby Daughter

A 22-year-old Arlington housepainter was jailed last night for felonious assualt against his five-months-old daughter.

Fred Hensley, jr., who rooms at 1226 N. Nelson st., told police he did it "to stop the baby from crying, and I don't care if I get 15 years for it."

The baby, Connie Louise Hensley, was released from Arlington Hospital after being treated for bruises on both legs and about the eyes.

Arlington police said they received a call about 3:45 p. m. from the landlady at the rooming house, who said a child was being beaten.

Mrs. Marie Hensley, 20, told police her husband had been holding the baby, who began to cry when he put her down.

"He slapped her twice, and then grabbed at her throat," the mother reported. "I ran across the room and grabbed her away."

Hensley told police he had moved to the N. Nelson st. address about three weeks ago from Gainesville, Va. The couple has no other children.

Arraigned before County Court Judge Paul D. Brown, he was held without bond pending a medical examination of the child.

Federal Building Plans Altered To Prevent 'Piling Up' in Area

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Plans for the construction and location of Federal buildings here and elsewhere are being altered in view of the Korean crisis, it was learned yesterday. These are among the definite steps that have been taken:

1. The plan for the construction of a new addition to Walter Reed Hospital here is being changed to make the addition bombproof. The air-conditioned structure will have a minimum of windows and doors. Its walls will be of thick concrete construction.

2. The Veterans' Administration has given up its plan to locate a proposed new hospital here or in the immediate vicinity of this city. The hospital had been slated for the Nevius tract across Memorial Bridge in Arlington.

VA officials are now considering several other sites for the proposed structure, and the one closest to the city is reported to be 30 miles away. In addition, proposed VA hospital sites in

10,000 U. S. Fliers And 1500 Sailors Now in Britain

London, July 24 (AP).—The United States now has 11,500 members of its Navy and Air Force stationed in Britain.

Prime Minister Attlee furnished the figure in Commons today in reply to a question.

Attlee said it includes 10,000 Air Force men in three B-29 groups with a total of about 180 aircraft. The Navy has 1500 men stationed here, including those attached to the headquarters of the Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean Fleet.

'Piggy-Back' Rocket Fired Horizontally

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Cocoa, Fla., July 24 (U.P.).—A double-headed rocket, first ever fired on a horizontal flight from American soil, flashed over the Atlantic today at 3600 miles an hour.

The Air Force shot a German V-2 with an American-made "Wac corporal" secondary rocket in its nose 10 miles into the air over the long-range proving ground here.

Then, by remote control, the V-2 missile was sent 48 miles out over the Atlantic, and the "Wac corporal" was projected another 15 miles.

Technicians, by touch of a button, leveled off the V-2 part, sending it east over seas cleared of ships and planes.

Col. H. R. Turner, Army ordnance officer in charge of the firing, called it "a complete success." The same rocket failed to go off last Wednesday.

Radio beams guided the missile while radar traced its course and other instruments recorded data of the flight. Turner said previously that the rocket could carry any destructive material available, presumably an atomic warhead.

He said the V-2 was fired on an arc similar to the trajectory of an artillery shell. It climbed to 51,000 feet, and started down, throwing out the "Wac corporal" and then exploding at 20,000 feet.

Except for the revelation that the secondary rocket went another 15 miles, all information on the performance was classified top secret.

By radar control, the Air Force touched off TNT that shattered the V-2 at 20,000 feet. Bits of metal and costly precision instruments fell into the ocean.

Turner said the rocket would not be used against an enemy in any war that developed "for at least two years."

The double-headed missile was 56 feet long and weighed 14 tons. It was fired from Cape Canaveral.

Ship Workers Vote Effort to End Strike

New York, July 24 (AP).—About 1700 idle Brooklyn shipworkers voted today to try to resume contract talks with the big Todd Shipyards Corp., if striking Hoboken, N. J., workers are willing.

At a union meeting, workers at Todd's Brooklyn yards decided to continue their unofficial walkout, pending discussions with strikers at the firm's Hoboken yards on the plan to call off the stoppage, which began this morning.

Meanwhile, work was at a standstill at the two New York Harbor yards of Todd, one of the Nation's biggest ship repair concerns. A spokesman said the stoppage came as the company was preparing to begin work on two freighters, taken out of "mothballs" and assigned to it to be refitted for use in Korean war shipping.

In Baltimore, 1500 union ship workers were voting on whether to strike against the Maryland Drydock Co. Their contract expired last midnight, as did the union contract with Todd here.

The key issue, the Todd company says, is the union's refusal to submit to a worker "interchangeability" plan whereby specialized workers could be used to perform jobs on outside their speciality on a temporary basis.

The union, which originally asked a 14-cent hourly wage boost, has cut its wage demand to 6 cents. The company has offered 2. Wages under the old contract averaged $1.55 hourly.

Studebaker Shuts Down During Foundry Strike

South Bend, Ind., July 24 (AP).—The Studebaker Corp. notified its employes today that because of "an unauthorized walkout" in its foundry its plants here would be closed until further notice.

Company officials and officers of the CIO-United Auto Workers would make no comment on the shutdown.

There were unofficial reports that inter-union strife led to the walkout.

The corporation has been employing about 17,000 production workers.

Christoffel Denied Appeal File Extension

Former Milwaukee labor leader Harold R. Christoffel yesterday apparently lost his last chance to appeal his second conviction for perjury.

The Court of Appeals denied Christoffel's motion to extend the time for filing the record on appeal. Government officials said the denial would eliminate the possibility of appeal.

Notice of appeal was filed on March 14 when Christoffel was convicted of lying to the House Committee on Education and Labor as to whether he had any connections with the Communist Party. He was sentenced to serve two to six years in prison.

No record on appeal was ever filed, although extensions of time were granted.

The court ruled yesterday that a further extension could not be granted because O. John Rogge, Christoffel's counsel, showed "no excusable neglect" for not conforming to federal rules.

'Endless' Flow Of Red Tanks Is War Puzzle

By Russel Brines

Tokyo, July 24 (AP).—How do the North Koreans manage to keep coming on in their Russian-built tanks?

Nobody here knows.

The claims of Red tanks destroyed total more than 250 after four weeks of the Korean war. But headquarters officers said the figure is exaggerated.

Some of the tank kills probably were reported in duplicate. Others were reported by fighter pilots after a fleeting glimpse at jet speed. Headquarters said a figure of 125 tanks knocked out would be more realistic.

Washington officials have estimated the Communists had 300 Russian-made tanks in north Korea before they attacked.

General MacArthur's headquarters wants to know:

How many Red tanks are in action and how many more can the Russians supply?

How are they getting fuel and ammunition through an aerial blockade of increasing effectiveness?

How will this prime Communist battle weapon do against real competition—the new bazookas and the freshly planted mine fields?

The Air Force is trying to minimize the possibility of replacement from Siberia by aiming heavy B-29 raids at railroads in north Korean territory.

That's the reason for the big Superfort blasts at Wonsan, the railroad marshaling yards at Seoul, and at key bridges throughout north Korea.

The ability of the North Koreans to keep supplies moving to the front has been one of the surprises of the war.

Where do they get their fuel?

One American pilot remarked that maybe the Reds had concealed caches of fuel and ammunition in the south long before the invasion.

Another guess is that the North Koreans brought tremendous amounts of supplies with them in the first early days when they could move without aerial attack.

Up to now the Red tanks have been more than a match for their opposition.

Now the Americans are evening things up. The new killer bazooka—3.5-inch rocket launcher—got eight tanks out of eight in its first battlefield test in the Taejon area.

For the first time the Red tankmen have run into a cleverly planted minefield.

The Red tank might soon lose its supermonster reputation.

Sen. Morse Urges GOP to Return Dewey as Leader

Clinton, N. Y., July 24 (U.P.).—U. S. Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) beat the drums again today for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, twice-defeated Republican presidential candidate.

In a speech at the Republican State Committee's second annual school of politics, Morse urged his party to "do everything possible to return . . . Dewey's leadership both at State and national levels."

Dewey announced recently he would not run this fall for a third term as Governor. Previously, he disavowed any further presidential aspirations.

"It was a pleasure," Morse said, "for me to campaign for your Governor for President—in 1948—and it will be many, many years before the people realize their tremendous loss in not electing him to that office.

"His leadership is needed today at this time of great crisis."

Only 15 of 61 From District Pass Initial Post-Korean Draft Call Pre-Induction Test

The District's first post-Korean draft call, consisting of 61 men, 24 and 25 years of age, yesterday netted only 15 who passed pre-induction mental and physical tests.

The number finally inducted into the service may be cut even further, officials pointed out, because some of those who passed had been married since registration, or had prior military service which did not show on Selective Service records.

Of the 61 District men called, 15 failed to show up as ordered at the Army Air Force recruiting office, 403 10th st. nw., at 7:30 a. m. yesterday.

Draft officials, checking on the absentees, found some had reached the age of 26, others were veterans not subject to induction at this time.

Marylanders Fail

In addition to the District men, six from St. Mary's County, Md., went through the all-day processing held at the main recruiting station at Arlington Farms at the same time. None of the six definitely passed the mental and physical exams, though four will be checked further as possibles.

The District contingent, sent by Local Selective Service Boards 11 and 15, arrived by bus at Arlington Farms from the downtown recruiting station at 8:30 a. m.

From Draft Board 11: Cyril B. Cummings, 24, 305 9th st. se.; William E. Edmonds, 24, 757 6th st. se.; Anthony L. Mamakos, 24, 605 D st. se., and Isaac C. Pitts, 25, 1620 3d st. nw.

Datcher, 24, 39 O st. sw.; Herbert M. Jefferson, 24, 920 46th st. ne.; Cecil C. Jones, 24, 1811 D st. ne.; James R. King, 24, 3808 37th pl., Brentwood; Robert E. Names of these men will be sent to their Selective Service boards within a week, officials said. Those otherwise qualified for induction will have at least 21 days before receiving "greetings" and "invitations" to serve from the President. Usually, another 10 days is then allowed to settle their affairs before going to camp.

Some British Laborites Ask Closer Ties With Russians

London, July 24 (AP).—Some of the 30 planks proposed by the rank and file for the Labor Party's platform call on Britain to move closer to Russia, get out of the cold war and outlaw the atomic bomb.

The suggested resolutions, submitted to Labor Party chiefs before the Korean outbreak, were released for publication tonight. They will be considered at the party conference October 2-6 when domestic and foreign policies will be outlined for the coming year in which a new general election may be held.

Most of the packet of 300 suggested resolutions deal with domestic policy. Only 27 come under the heading, "foreign policyp and war danger."

The local Norwood Labor Party was critical of Britain's policy of permitting United States airmen and B-29 bombers to be stationed in Britain "and the proposal for storage in Britain of American atom bombs."

The Electrical Trades Union suggested that the government call a conference of Britain, the U. S., Russia, France and Communist China "for the purpose of concluding a peace pact among these nations." It said such a pact would "provide the millions of common people throughout the world with a new hope that war can be prevented."

Several of the rank and file resolutions called for banning the atom bomb, germ warfare and other means of mass slaughter. Others said the government's foreign policy was tied too closely with the United States and proposed that Britain could best act for peace by becoming a buffer between the Communist East and capitalist West.

Several followed the general tone of the resolution proposed by the Uxbridge Labor Party. It asked the "government not to take part in the cold war but instead to pursue a policy based upon friendship toward the Soviet and its allies as well as toward the United States."

The Cirencester and Tewkesbury Labor Party urged the government to "end the present foreign policy, with its inherent subservience to the capitalist-imperialist United States of America, and to seek closer relations with the Socialist countries of the world."

Other resolutions proposed that the government lead a disarmament movement, lift East-West trade barriers, abolish conscription and slash arms spending.

5 More Are Found Plane Victims; Total Put at 39

Myrtle Beach, S. C., July 24 (AP).—An Air Force officer tonight said that 39 bodies have been recovered from the crash of a transport plane near here yesterday.

Previous reports had given the death toll as 34—including 30 members of the Tennessee Air National Guard and four Air Reserve crewmen from Florida.

But Capt. E. S. Wood, public information officer at Shaw Air Force Base at Sumter, said 39 bodies have been recovered, and medical officers and searchers were agreed they had recovered the bodies of all on the C-46 plane, which exploded in flames shortly after taking off from Myrtle Beach.

The manifest showed 30 Tennessee Guardsmen on the plane. Wood said the five extra bodies were probably those of military hitchhikers. An Army board of inquiry will begin an investigation Tuesday.

Video Mechanic Declared Dead Of Poison Acid

An Alexandria television mechanic died of poisoning last night, police said, after he apparently drank almost a waterglass-full of acid.

George M. Rubley, 47, was pronounced dead in his room at 204 E. Randolph st., Alexandria, by Alexandria Coroner John A. Sims about 6:30 p. m. Dr. Sims ordered an autopsy.

Inspector Russell A. Hawes, chief of Alexandria detectives, said a notation, "Call My Wife," was written in a notebook. Hawes said Rubley's estranged wife, Alice, lives in Washington. An empty bottle that had contained some form of acid also was found, the inspector reported.

Elephant Trainer, Tired of It, Enlists

Chicago, July 24 (AP).—The Army got a 21-year-old elephant hunter and trainer today.

Ralph Brown, who told recruiters "I'm just tired of elephants," signed up for a three-year enlistment.

He said he has been employed by Clyde Beatty, animal trainer and circus owner., for five years.

He has been on 18 African hunts, he told reporters.

"My experience may come in handy in the Army," he said.

Program to Halt Foe's Infiltration Devised by Major

Somewhere in Korea, July 24 (U.P.)—Maj. John P. Powhida, a military police officer from Pennsylvania, was credited today with devising "operation security"—a plan designed to end the Communist practice of stealing behind American lines disguised as friendly peasants.

Powhida, a veteran of seven European campaigns in the last war prepared leaflets which were dropped by planes telling all refugees to move northward, that travelers in the opposite direction would be considered enemies.

Powhida also established check points to screen all evacuees, refugees and stragglers. In battle areas, where essential citizens have remained, their movements for food and water are permitted only between 10 a. m. and noon daily under Powhida's system.

Bill to Outlaw Reds Shelved in Argentina

Buenos Aires, July 24 (AP).—Congressional leaders of President Juan D. Peron's party repudiated today proposed legislation to outlaw communism in Argentina.

A bill to this effect was introduced July 19 by four administration deputies. Today, Hector J. Campora, president of the Chamber of Deputies, and Deputy Angel Miel Asquia, Peronista Leader, told newsmen the bill does not have the government's indorsement.

They added it will not be considered by any committee or debated on the floor.

Pravda Sees 'Indignation' At U. S. Action

London, July 24 (U.P.)—Yakov Victorov, writing in Pravda, today said the rest of the world's "profound indignation" over American policy in Korea was reflected in the "complete failure" of other United Nations members to send ground forces to Korea.

He also attacked U. N. Secretary General Trygve Lie for "assuming the little-honored role of servant of the American aggressors." The article was broadcast by Moscow Radio.

Pravda Says U. S. Plans Bigger Aggression

Moscow, July 24 (U.P.)—The Communist Party organ Pravda declared today that President Truman has "crudely and frankly showed that the aggression in Korea forms only a part of the big, aggressive program of American imperialism."

It was Pravda's first comment on President Truman's message to Congress.

Yakov Victorov, the commentator, said that in addidtion to billions of dollars already being spent on arms, the United States will appropriate billions more to arm the Atlantic powers "and intensify aggression, not only in Korea, but also in Indo-China and the Philippines."

3 Airport Aides Hurt as Gas Fumes Explode

Three airport employes were slightly injured yesterday when exploding gas fumes punched two holes in the wing of a Capital Airlines cargo plane in a hangar at National Airport yesterday.

Mechanics standing nearby quickly squelched the small fire that followed with fire extinguishers, but officials said it might cost $75,000 to replace the wing on the four-engined DC-4.

Treated at the field infirmary were Vincent Griffin, 1708 R st. se., who suffered a slight burn on his face; Harry Landrum, 1882 M st. se., who was slightly grazed by a piece of flying metal; and Noah Arnold, 2111 27th st S. Arlington, who suffered a cut over his eye while helping clear the area. All were released.

Arthur Morgan's Grandson Faces Draft Charges

Dayton, Ohio, July 24 (U.P.)—Arthur E. Morgan 3d., 18-year-old grandson of one-time TVA Chairman Arthur E. Morgan, today was ordered to appear before a U. S. Commissioner to face charges of failing to register for the draft.

The youth entered no plea at today's hearing and was released on his own recognizance.

"My refusal to register is the expression of my objection to the draft law and what it stands for—a war measure," he said later.

Morgan said he was reared as a Quaker, but was not now a member of the sect which is opposed to war.

Acheson's Talk Optimistic

Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) voiced new optimism about the world situation yesterday after his Senate Foreign Relations Committee got a review of developments from Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

"I feel more optimistic and hopeful," said Connally.

He told newsmen Acheson had given a "comprehensive" picture of world events, touching on "Korea and other danger spots in the Middle East, the Far East and Europe."

While he would give no details and did not quote Acheson, Connally said the Administration is "optimistic" that other nations may "do more about supplying forces" to help American troops in Korea.

He also said there may be a shift in Marshall Plan emphasis to provide more military production in Europe.

London Pact Talks Under Way Today

London, July 24 (U.P.).—Preliminary talks of the North Atlantic "cold war cabinet" opened here today when America's Charles Spofford and Britain's Sir Frederick Hoyar Millar met informally.

The formal, inaugural session of the Council of Deputies will be held Tuesday in Lancaster House, where the Atlantic Pact Foreign Ministers decided in May to set up a permanent Council of Deputies.

The four-day conference then will plan vigorous action of the 12 Atlantic Treaty Powers for the defense of Europe and the Atlantic area.

Spofford has brought strong demands from President Truman that other countries match the new 10-billion-dollar American arms program, reliable sources said.

These high sources also said the United States is prepared to offer a vastly increasing foreign military aid program, perhaps as much as an additional five billion dollars.

The emphasis in the four days ahead will be on speed and the widest possible cooperative effort for common European defense. Spofford, when he arrived here yesterday, stressed the urgency in view of the Korean war.

One of the first problems will be the financing of the collective defense force, on which the Foreign Ministers agreed during their May meeting. Estimates drawn up before the Korean conflict already are considered outdated.

European countries, although chary of increased defense budgets, are not likely to challenge the need for an expanded defense program.

Experts estimate that today western Europe can put a maximum of 15 divisions into the field, as compared with some 200 or more divisions of the Soviet Union and its satellites in Europe.

The deputies are supposed to produce tangible results within the next few weeks for the approval of their Foreign Ministers when the latter meet in New York in September.

A permanent organization will be set up during the present conference, with a full-time staff. The deputies themselves will convene whenever required.

The over-all directive to the deputies is to build up "a system of defense, equipped with modern weapons and capable of withstanding any external threat directed against any of them."

Officials said that the question of rearming Germany and of using German industry for European defense was not on the agenda, but may be raised during discussions.

Living Off Land

Korean Reds Strip South Of Crops

Tokyo, July 24 (U.P.).—Communist North Korean troops, their supply lines battered by an unrelenting allied air offensive, are trying to live off the land in their southward push, Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported today.

"Chow on the hoof or straight from the rice paddies to the mess kit is the order of the day for Red soldiers in South Korea," the United Nations commander said.

Intelligence reports show that the portion of South Korea now occupied by the Communists is being efficiently and systematically stripped to supply them with food, MacArthur said.

"Pigs, Cows Liberated"

"Pigs, cows, chickens and rice are liberated with equal dispatch to provide rations for the invading army," MacArthur said, adding that the reluctant owners considered themselves lucky if the invaders offered so much as a curt nod of thanks in exchange.

MacArthur also reported that North Koreans were "resorting to all pes of unorthodox and impromptu measures in their efforts to survive United States air and artillery attacks."

"One American airman tells, half-admiringly, of the resourceful North Korean tanker who hitched two bullocks to the front of his tank in the vain hope that it would be mistaken for a farm wagon," MacArthur said.

"Tanks masquerading as haystacks or fitted out with thatched roofs and disguised as houses have also been discovered and destroyed by keen-eyed American airmen."

MacArthur said the North Koreans were using ox-carts extensively to carry supplies to the front lines and in humorous vein added:

"This may account for a report turned in by one pilot who professes to have witnessed two enraged bullocks stampeding through a column of infantry after an aerial rocket attack."

MacArthur said the accurate fire of five-inch naval guns had "zeroed in" the main east coast road to such an extent that even individual enemy vehicles were being picked off.

Ship Shelling Korea Headed By D.C. Officer

A United States Far East Naval Base, July 24 (AP).—Capt. Jesse Sowell of Washington, D. C., brought his cruiser into port today, fresh from bombardment strikes against North Korea, and prepared to hand the ship over to a new captain.

He had high praise for the craft and crew which has plastered Communist installations on both sides of the Korean peninsula.

"Everybody did exceedingly well and should be proud of a splendid job," the captain said. He's leaving his ship to enter the War College at Washington.

Sowell's successor will be Capt. William Kenney of Nashville, Tenn.

"Two thirds of this crew were new when he left the Atlantic for Pacific duty," Captain Sowell said. "Only a small percentage had combat service. I have nothing but highest praise for them."

Despite repeated forays against enemy installations, the cruiser has not suffered a single casualty.

[Captain Sowell, 46, is married and lives at 1606 44th st. nw. His wife is the former Miss Helen Phillips, of Washington. They have one child, Diana, 13.

[A 1925 graduate of the Naval Academy, he has won a number of campaign medals and ribbons—among them the Legion of Merit and a Gold Star.

[Captain Sowell served aboard destroyers in the early phases of World War II, commanding Destroyer Division No. 32 in 1943 and 1944. Also in 1944, he commanded Task Force 61.

[He was attached to the office of Chief of Naval Operations from 1945 to 1949, when he received command of a cruiser.

Editor's Note.]

Captain and crew shared the view that action against the Korean Peninsula was hard work, but most crew members spoke casually of their experiences.

Press and Wire Services Asked To Curb News of Troop Calls

The Army yesterday asked newspapers and wire services not to publish or compile national or State roundups of National Guard and Reserve units being called to active duty.

Maj. Gen. F. L. Parks, Army's chief information officer, said such compilations would be valuable to a foreign agent.

"It is something that if he had to get it together with his own resources it would cost milions of dollars, whereas if the wire services make it available to him it costs only five cents," Parks said in a letter to the wire services.

"It is therefore urgently requested that no State or national roundup of mobilized National Guards or Reserve units be undertaken by the wire services and those that have already been made be killed and not published."

There is no legal restriction on such stories. The wire services, newspapers and radio stations customarily abide by official requests when the question of military security is involved.

Parks said the Governors of the States have been asked to make future announcements of Guard and Reserve callups only for local communities involved.

Some roundup stories on a national basis were compiled Sunday and published before the Army made its request yesterday. They were based on announcements by individual governors.

Black-Faced GI Commandos Raid Korea Coast North of 38th Parallel, Blow Up Rail Tunnel

An American Far East Naval Base, July 24 (AP).—Daring Navy and Marine commandos today told how they blasted a rail tunnel in a night raid on Korea's east coast north of the 38th Parallel.

"This was not at all rough as compared with the last war," said Marine Second Lieut. Richard M. Johnson, 26, Oceanside, Calif.

Johnson, on temporary duty from the First Marine Division, was the demolition officer.

[Johnson, a native of Portland, Me., enlisted in the Marines after graduation from high school in Philadelphia in 1940, and during World War II served with the Marine Air Wing in the Pacific theater. He was stationed in Washington in 1947-48.

[His father, Herbert A. Johnson of 2407 15th st. nw., is personnel officer, board of governors, Federal Reserve Board. The father was twice wounded during his 14 years' service with the corps, and prior to his retirement, saw service in various Latin-American countries and as a captain in the Fifth Regiment in France during World War I.—Editor's note.]

A picked band of Commandos, their faces blackened with burnt cork, transferred from a cruiser to a destroyer. When close to the rocky Korean coast they piled into a motorboat and cruised shoreward.

Fishing Boat Passes

"A fishing boat passed within 200 yards of us," said Lieut. Comdr. William Porter, 38, Bronxville, N. Y., the leader.

"Just as we were about to hit the beach our propeller fouled. The water was too deep to jump, so the skipper cut the motor and we drifted ashore.

"It was so pitch dark we could not see the bow. Just as we got ashore a locomotive went through the tunnel. Its lights illuminated the area but they did not see us.

"We had to climb a 60-degree slope covered with loose rocks.

"We were pretty well loaded with explosives. My biggest worry was that someone would slip and blow us up. It was the only worry we had . . .

"After we finished our work we doubled back."

Two seamen who set the charges said they didn't wait to hear the explosion. They were Chief Gunner's Mate Myron K. Lovejoy, Long Beach, Calif., and Hastings, Nebr., and Gunner's Mate Third Class Junior E. Wilson, Omak, Wash.

Wilson wore a beard, as did two other raiders, Paul A. Keane, 26, boatswain's mate second class, Portland, Oreg., and Provincetown, Mass., and Howard Carl Scheundmann, 26, Gunner's Mate First Class, Okauchee, Wisc.

"It was the longest hour and a half that I ever stood guard duty," said Pfc. Joseph Christ, 20, Connellsville, Pa.

Pfc. Robert Lugen, 25, St. Petersburg, Fla., and Pfc. Jack Lee Pope, 21 Cedar Rapids, Iowa, nodded agreement.

"There were many noises around," said Pope. "It might have been birds or field mice. We didn't investigate."

"We were too far away to hear any explosion," said Porter. "On the ship a deck officer said he saw a train enter the tunnel but not come out."

Troop-Laden Invasion Junks Take Position Off Quemoys

Taipei, Formosa, July 24 (U.P.).—Junks laden with Communist troops moved into position today for the expected invasion of Quemoy (Kinmen) and Little Quemoy Islands, the two Nationalist defense outposts off the Chinese mainland, it was announced officially.

The Nationalists apparently expected a Red amphibious assault momentarily.

Communist artillery from Red-held Amoy Island opened up on Quemoy Friday night and kept up the "sofetning-up" barrage intermittently for more than 48 hours. Col. Victor Hu of the National Defense Ministry said the guns still were working over the tiny islands at 1 a. m. Monday.

The junks were reported to have been assembled off Amoy, five miles from Quemoy, Friday night, but troops apparently did not go aboard until today. Nationalist intelligence officers also reprted that Red Gen. Chen Yi has massed four armies along the Chekiang and Fukien invasion coast.

(Chinese Communist broadcasts said preparations are being completed for "the last big battle of the war of liberation.")

Quemoy and Little Quemoy are about 100 miles west of Formosa and regarded by both Nationalists and Communists as stepping stones from the mainland to Formosa.

Nationalist troops on the Quemoys fought off a Communist invasion attempt last October. It was one of the most furious battles of the civil war and, to date, the Nationalists' sole victory.

It was after Mme. Chiang Kai-shek visited the beaches of Quemoy, strewn with battle wreckage, that she vowed to die, if necessary, to defend Formosa, the last Nationalist bastion.

Red guns from Amoy were trained on Guanau, on the northwestern tip of Quemoy, where Gen. Hu Li-en has his headquarters.

The government has ordered its navy and air force to go into action immediately if the Communists try to invade Quemoy, no matter what the United States Seventh Fleet decides to do.

When President Truman dispatched the Seventh Fleet to detionalists not to carry the war to the Communists on the mainland. the Quemoys are close to the mainland and, Washington dispatches indicated, on the Communist side of—and outside—the United States patrol area.

'Stalin Stadium' Vetoed By French With a Bang

Port du Bouc, France, July 24 (U.P.).—Left-wing workers of this town insisted on naming the new football arena "Stalin Stadium."

Other workers objected—and blew up part of the stadium yesterday.

The town council will decide on a name later this week.

Navy Offers 1300 Jobs; 20,000 Apply for Them

New York, July 24 (AP).—The Navy announced last Monday it wanted to hire 1300 workers for the Brooklyn naval shipyard.

The results:

Fifteen thousand applications have been received and when the shipyard employment office opened today the Navy estimated 5000 persons were waiting in line.

Despite all this, the Navy said it filled only about 500 of the jobs and still needs workers with certain specialized skills such as shipwrights, pipe fitters, insulators and boiler makers.

7 Sub Sightings Off Canada Coast Are Reported

Ottawa, July 24 (AP).—A naval spokesman today disclosed that the Navy has received seven reports of submarine sightings off Canada's east coast—the latest as late as last night.

The sub sightings included five in the Bay of Fundy off the New Brunswick coast, a sixth off the northern tip of Cape Breton Island and the seventh in the Grand Banks area east of Newfoundland.

In none of the cases, said the spokesman, does the Canadian navy have conclusive proof that a submarine was lurking in the area.

At Halifax, Rear Admiral E. R. Mainguy, chief of the navy's Atlantic command, today announced two frigates, the Swansea and the La Hulloise, were on patrol in search of unidentified undersea craft.

2 Strange Subs Seen By Bermuda-Bound Ship

Bermuda, July 24 (U.P.).—The chief engineer of an American freighter that arrived here today from Jacksonville, Fla., said he had sighted two unidentified submarines "unlike anthing we'd seen before."

The engineer, E. K. Thompson, of the freighter Arbutus, said he saw the first sub last Tuesday about 250 miles east of Jacksonville. He spotted the second one 250 miles west of Bermuda, Thompson said.

Two German Red Chiefs Given Party Rule Without Any Limit

Berlin, July 25 (AP).—German Communists gave their leaders a blank check today to run eastern Germany.

President Wilhelm Pieck and Prime Minister Otto Grotewohl of the East German government were reelected cochairmen of the Socialist Unity (Communist) Party without opposition at the final session of the party convention. No limit to their term of party office was fixed. The only deadline was the "next party day"—which cannot be called without the approval of either Pieck of Grotewohl.

Backed by Russian bayonets, the party runs eastern Germany.

The 4000 delegates wound up the five-day convention with a resounding "aye" for the new East German five-year plan, calculated to link the Soviet Zone and its 18 million people with the eastern economic bloc.

They adopted a resolution calling on all Germans to condemn American intervention in Korea because "the same thing can happen tomorrow in Germany." Then they showed how tightly they have woven their web with the Soviet sphere by parading in an "international peace demonstration" before high Communists from all the Cominform countries and several other countries.

Thousands of East German workers, blue-shirted youth brigades, and black-uniformed people's police marched down Unter Den Linden in a Moscow-type demonstration to the Lustgarten.

Several officers of the East German "sea police," wearing white caps like navy officers, took part in the review. Reports reaching West Berlin have said the German Communists were creating a virtual navy under the guise of sea police.

Palmiro Togliatti, Italian Communist leader, in a speech said "the people from the Elbe to the Yellow Sea have freed themselves and the Korean people will do likewise."

Harry Pollitt, British Communist chief, said "No English, French or German workers will take part in a war against the Soviet Union."

At Stuttgart, Hans Jahn, chairman of the West German railway union, warned that the Communists are setting up a sabotage plan against West German railways.

Speaking at a congress of the International Transport Federation he said he has a list of 26 Communist agents who have been ordered to organize sabotage units at West German railway centers. He said all west European countries should take warning, but he did not elaborate on his charges.

The convention announced an "all-German congres would be held in Berlin on August 24-25. This rally appeared to be planned as a springboard for a bigger drive to gain ground in West Germany.

Nomination Approved

President Truman's nomination of Clarence J. McCormick of Indiana to be Undersecretary of Agriculture was approved by the Senate yesterday without objection.

Bomb's Blast, Strikes Mark Leopold Fight

Brussels, Belgium, July 24 (U.P.)—A bomb destroyed two floors of a fashionable private home here today and scattered strikes broke out in industrial South Belgium as the Socialist-inspired campaign to force King Leopold from the throne mounted in intensity.

Police also reported that terrorists cut a foot-long section of rail out of the line at Leuze, near the French border, used to bring Flemish miners into Walloonia. The Flemings are pro-Leopold. It was the second such incident in that area.

The bomb, home-made, was hurled into the home of Gaston Geunis, a brewery engineer, in the Ixelles section, apparently by mistake. Geunis lives next door to the mother of Ernest-John Solvay, industrialist who backed Leopold's return after five years of exile.

No one was injured.

The ground and first floor of the Geunis home were burned out. Yesterday a bomb exploded in a power plant at Charleroi. Two bombings preceded the monarch's return Saturday. One was hurled against the walls of Laeken Palace, where he now is staying with his two sons, Baudouin and Albert.

An estimated 20,000 workers in the mines and smaller plants in Liege, Charleroi, Mons and Tubize struck for 24 hours to emphasize the Socialist Party's warning it will never recognize Leopold III as king.

A Socialist source said, however, that no general strike will be called now because hundreds of thousands of workers in the big iron and steel industries are on their annual two-week vacations.

The Socialist paper, Le Peuple, warned that the monarch may try to use the army and the police to keep his hold on the throne despite the opposition of almost half the nation. Leopold's opponents charge that he was sympathetic to the Nazis during the war.

Leopold received Premier Jean Duvieusart in a private audience at 11:30 a. m. Authoritative sources said they discussed bringing back Leopold's commoner wife, Princess de Rethy, who is pregnant.

Leopold will not go to Parliament Tuesday, it was announced. His message, published Saturday, will be read for him. Since his return at dawn Saturday the King has not left Laeken Palace, 6 miles from the heart of Brussels.

11 Floors and Lives

New York, July 24 (U.P.).—A 60-year-old woman plunged 11 floors from her Broadway hotel today and lived.

A wire netting over a skylight on a fourth-floor setback apparently saved Mrs. Anna Tannenbaum from death by breaking her fall.

Hospital officials said Mrs. Tannenbaum was in critical condition with a fractured pelvis, several broken ribs and both ankles broken.

Ferguson Raps Probe Report on McCarthy

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), charged yesterday that the report on the McCarthy Communist-in-Government investigation was the most "intemperate and abusive" such document ever filed in the Senate.

Its phrasing, he said, was reminiscent of Joseph Goebbels, Nazi propaganda minister, or Andrei Vishinsky, Soviet foreign minister.

Ferguson carried into the second week the Republican criticism of the report, which called the charges by Senator McCarthy (R., Wisc.), a "hoax and a fraud" and said McCarthy had utterly failed to prove his allegations. McCarthy will talk today.

Ferguson said the report, issued by the Democratic majority of a Foreign Relations Subcommittee, "used soft words to shield those who have been careless with national security." He wondered aloud who wrote it, saying it could not have been written by Senator Tydings (D., Md.), subcommittee chairman, or his two Democratic associates, Senators McMahon of Connecticut or Green of Rhode Island. (All three signed it.)

Asks Probe of Staff

Attacking dismissal of McCarthy's charges, Ferguson said there not only ought to be a new investigation of communism in the Government, but also an investigation of the Tydings subcommittee staff.

He disclosed that in 1947, a Senate Appropriations subcommittee informed Gen. George C. Marshall, then Secretary of State, of a "deliberate, calculated program to protect Communist personnel in high places" in the State Department. The same memorandum declared that another purpose of the asserted intrigue was "to reduce security and intelligence protection to a nullity."

Replying to the memo on June 24, 1947, the then assistant secretary of State John E. Peurifoy told the subcommittee that 10 employes, regarded as security risks, had been fired, including five named in the memorandum.

"In addition, I expect to take action on two more cases within the next few days," Peurifoy wrote.

"Of the remaining 55 cases of individuals employed in the department, concerning whom derogatory allegations have been made, three are either resigning or are being terminated by a reduction in force, and recommendations for security clearance have been made in eight cases, which are still being considered. The remaining 44 cases will be investigated further."

Touches on Alger Hiss

Ferguson touched on Alger Hiss, former State Department official convicted of lying when he swore he did not turn over secret government data to a Soviet courier. Hiss is at liberty pending action on his appeal.

Ferguson presented a confidential memorandum written March 7, 1946, by J. Anthony Panuch, State Department security officer. In it, Panuch vigorously opposed a departmental reorganization plan attributed to Hiss. He said it would give Hiss "working control" over documents moving to and from the United States delegation to the United Nations.

"The security hazard of such a setup, if eventually accomplished, would seem to warrant the continuing interest of the FBI and other security intelligence agencies," Panuch wrote.

Ferguson said he fears the McCarthy investigation report is apt to "lull the State Department into a false sense of security."

Senator Lodge (R., Mass.), one of the two Republicans on the investigating committee protested that the printed record of the hearings omitted 45 typewritten pages of questions which he thought the committee should ask, but which it didn't.

Senator McKellar (D., Tenn.) tried fruitlessly to get the Senate headed back to debate on the $34,700,000,000 single-package appropriation bill.

Remington's Trial to Be Set On Sept. 18

New York, July 24 (AP).—William W. Remington's lawyer said today that no defendant should have to answer "some crackpot who thinks Remington said something about communism 17 years ago."

Remington, former Commerce Department economist, is under indictment on a charge of lying when he denied to a Federal grand jury that he ever was a Communist.

His attorney, William C. Chanler, argued today that Remington should get a bill of particulars making known the facts and events by which the Government proposes to prove Remington was a Communist.

Thomas J. Donegan, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, opposed the motion. He said Remington was seeking to learn what evidence the Government has.

Federal Judge Sidney Sugarman reserved decision. He also set September 18 for fixing a trial date.

Remington has been accused of joining the Communist Party while employed by the Tennessee Valley Authority in the early 1930's. He has denied the charge. Before his indictment, he was cleared in a Washington loyalty board proceeding.

Airmen Drop 160,000 Pounds of Explosives On Red Supply Lines; 2-Day Total Is 210 Tons

A United States Air Force Base in Korea, Tuesday, July 25 (U.P.).—A fleet of B-29 Superfortresses blasted North Korean supply lines with 160,000 pounds of high explosives yesterday while other American planes kept up their relentless hammering of Red troops and installations along the Taejon front.

At the same time, it was announced that the Far East air forces had established an operating base near Eighth Army headquarters in Korea to speed up aerial attacks against the Communists.

Fighter planes of the Fifth Air Force, following up a near-record offensive Sunday, claimed the destruction of four tanks yesterday to bring to 47 the number destroyed or damaged by allied planes in two days.

The attack by the B-29s under command of Maj. Gen. Emmett (Rosy) O'Donnell, jr., followed up a Superfortress strike against industrial targets near Pyongyang, the Communist capital, Sunday, when 130 tons of bombs were dropped.

Other Superfortresses Sunday hit the railroad and road junction of Chungju, 52 miles northeast of Taejon, with "excellent" results and scored direct hits on rail bridges at Chongju and Kongu, 34 and 57 miles, respectively, southwest of Chungju.

The Superfortresses concentrated their 80 tons of bombs yesterday on roads, bridges and other links in the North Korean transportation system to the battle zone north of Taejon.

The B-29s met no enemy. F-51 Mustangs and B-26 bombers of the Fifth Air Force left their bases with the first light of dawn yesterday and flew more than 115 sorties during the daylight hours.

The speedy fighters worked over enemy targets near Taejon, Osan and Sojone, hit the Seoul and Kimpo airfields and strafed personnel at Rongju, Yongdok, Kwanju in far-ranging flights that took them the width of the peninsula.

The fighter pilots claimed destruction of four tanks, 13 trucks, four other vehicles, one locomotive, one power station and a railroad repair shop and damage to eight tanks, 44 other vehicles and probably a plane caught on the ground at the Kimpo airport.

The B-26s flew 21 sorties, hitting the railroad yards at Chechon with "good results" and damaging two highway bridges.

Along with their bombs and rockets, the Fifth Air Force planes showered the enemy front lines with leaflets urging North Korean soldiers to live for a united Korea rather than die uselessly in a war "that only weakens and destroys your country."

A report from the United States Seventh Fleet said that its carrier-based planes under command of Vice Admiral Arthur D. Struble had flown 573 sorties in three major strikes between July 3 and last Sunday, knocking out 40 enemy aircraft and probably destroying or damaging more.

In addition, the Panther jet fighters, Corsairs and Douglas Sky Raiders of the Seventh Fleet destroyed 41 locomotives and damaged 17 others, Struble reported.

Oil Refineries Destroyed

Two of the most damaging blows struck by the naval air arm, he said, were destruction of the Wonsan oil refineries far north of the thirty-eighth parlel border.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur gave Far East Air Forces fliers a verbal pat on the back for their "magnificent contribution" to the Korean conflict.

MacArthur's praise was contained in a letter to Lieut. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, commander.

Red Forces Enter Yongdong; Bitter Fighting Is Continuing

Heaviest Action Near Yongdong

Heaviest action, however, centered near Yongdong, 50 air miles southwest of Yechon.

The Yongdong defenses, manned by the U. S. First Cavalry Division, are astride the vital highway and double-track railroad that leads southeast to the American supply port of Pusan.

On that front, MacArthur reported, the Reds hurled a tank-led attack at the U. S. First Cavalry Monday night. It was stopped cold. Three of the eight tanks were knocked out by superbazooka rockets and tank killer teams were sent to hunt the others down in the darkness. The Red infantry retreated.

Front line dispatches, reporting another Red attack against the First Cavalry along the central front during the day Monday, said American ground forces and planes knocked out five Red tanks and pinned down two others.

Despite the earlier setbacks, the invaders maintained constant pressure. Associated Press Correspondent Hal Boyle reported the Reds hammered American forces holding eight miles of the Taejon-Yongdong highway steadily with artillery and mortar fire.

They tried desperately to get around this line. MacArthur reported the North Koreans were trying unsuccessfully to recross the twisting Kum River to get in back of the Americans.

Road Block Behind U. S. Units

At one point, Boyle reported, the Reds set up a road block behind advanced American units. Mortars and infantry supported the road block. The United States commander called up American tanks. With the aid of artillery, Boyle reported, the tanks cleaned out the road block within two hours.

"We didn't fool with it," the artillery commander said.

In the mountains north and northeast of Yongdong, the Red Second Division launched a three-pronged attack down mountain roads and trails. One reached the village of Poun, 22 miles north of Yongdong. The other two columns were 15 and 20 miles northeast of Poun on mountain trails that wind southward toward Hamchang, in about the center of the active front.

Red tanks leading the long roving sweep down the west coast ran into opposition only from South Korean police. Communist tank and infantry patrols reached as far south as Mokpo, naval base almost at the southwestern tip of Korea.

These tank-infantry patrols reached back up to Namwon, astride main lines of communication which stretch across the southern end of the peninsula to the American supply base of Pusan on the east coast, and up the interior toward the United States supply line.

U. S. Not Worried by Move

Their movements threatened a wide sweeping flanking action, but all were in light force. United States headquarters indicated it wasn't worried.

(Pentagon officials in Washington indicated that the defense of the southwestern corner of Korea might be no longer practical or possible.

(The line across Korea now is more than 200 miles long, but it is manned only by units of three American divisions and the smaller more lightly-armed South Korean units.

(A Pentagon briefing officer said that in such a situation normal practice is to contract the line to give greater manpower along a smaller perimeter.

(This appears another way of saying we are about to fall back into an arc around southeast Korea. At the bottom of the defended area is the key point of Pusan, the port through which practically all supplies and reinforcements for the American forces flow.)

"Measures being taken to contain or eliminate these roving bands cannot be disclosed at this time," MacArthur said. Indications have been that he would rely heavily on the Air Force to check whatever threat may come from these units.

American ability to do this was enhanced by movement of Far East Air Force Headquarters from Japan to Korea.

On the eastern anchor of the front—near rubbled Yongdok, allied naval forces shelled Red concentrations effectively. Their fire was somewhat hampered by the fluidity of the lines. MacArthur called it an "intermingling of enemy and friendly troops." The town of Yongdok itself, which was captured by the allies last week and then retaken by the invaders, remained in Communist hands. Communist guerillas were active at several points aong the coast south of American lines.

Back of the front, B-29 Superforts ranged unchallenged in clear weather, pounding at the northerners' transport lines. Eighty tons of bombs rained down on bridges and roads leading to the Taejon-Yongdong front.

MacArthur described the front as running like this:

From Kwangju in the southwestern corner of Korea, northeast to Namwon, (the Reds are virtually unopposed in this area), north to Chinan, northeast to a point eight miles northwest of Yongdong, in a jagged line running north and then northeast to a point four miles south of Ochon, thence east to two miles north of Yechon, northeast to two miles south of Yengju, and thence southeast to the coast two miles south of Yongdok.

40 Combat Ships, Other Craft Ordered to Fleet Duty

Navy expansion program, noting it still will leave the fleet short of its 1949 strength—before the defense economy program. Vessels, however, will be largely manned at war-strength during coming months instead of way under two years ago.

There was no official word of the breakdown of the new aircraft production program contemplated under the $2,777,300,000 asked for the Air Force and $646,269,000 proposed for the Navy. Aircraft industry sources, however, felt the overwhelming emphasis wold see on fighters and other tactical aircraft.

Republic is expected to get heavy new orders for its jet F-84-E close-support fighter-bomber and the newer version with swept-back wings—the F-96. Substantial orders are likely for newer models of North American's F-86, and Lockheed's F-94 all-weather fighter.

Fairchild in Hagerstown also is due for additional orders of Packet transports, along with new money for the big Douglas C-124, Boeing C-97 and some of the new assault transports—built by Chase Northrop. Some of the money also is expected to go for Boeing bombers—either B-50 superforts or B-27 jets or both.

Meanwhile, the Marine Corps canceled the second phase of "Operation Criss-Cross," for which Washington's Marine Reserve Fighter Squadron and 19 other squadrons were to have flown to El Toro, Calif., August 5 to 19.

Some 3000 Marine reservists in 15 fighter and five radar squadrons from Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Jacksonville, Miami, Atlanta, Birmingham, Columbus, Detroit and Chicago, were to have taken part in the maneuver as their annual two-week active training period.

Because some of the units are being called into service, the exercise has been dropped and the units not to be mobilized will take their summer training at their home base.

At Anacostia, it was said no definite orders have been received for such training, but it was expected the local Marine reserve airmen would base here and do much of their actual flying at Webster Field, Patuxent, Md. Inasmuch as housing facilities at Anacostia are limited, some of the officers and men will live at home.

It also was announced that newly enrolled Women Marines in the Organized Reserve units being mobilized will not be called at this time but will be ordered to take "boot" training at a later date. Only women reservists who have had at least 90 days' active duty or who have attended 36 weekly drills or 30 weekly drills plus 10 days active duty will go in with their units.

Washington's Marine Reserves have one platoon of women. They will be slit up after being mobilized.

In another development, the Army announced it will reopen Camp Breckinridge, Ky., as a replacement training center. The camp will start receiving recruits and draftees about mid-September and can reach its training capacity of 22,000 men by October 1, officials said.

This is the second training center ordered reopened, Camp Jackson, S. C., haveing been reactivated. The move will give the Army six such basic training centers.

recognizing the need for flexibility to meet changing conditions."

Mr. Truman did not give any target date for the manpower build-up of 600,000 in the armed forces. e simply said that the estimates called for that much of an increase by the end of the 1951 fiscal year, which is June 30 next.

The White House statement gave this further breakdown of the money requested of Congress:

For military pay, clohting and allowances, $1,342,600,000; for operation and maintenance of plants and facilities, such as tanks, planes, guns and ships, $2,504,800,000; for aircraft procurement, $3,344,600,000; for ship construction, $185,000,000; and for tanks, guns, field artillery, electronics and other major procurement, $2,646,000,000.

The statement said that the remainder of the estimate $463,976,000—would go for high priority construction, research development, industrial mobilization, and miscellaneous establishment-wide activities and contingencies.

The Simple Truth About "EASY TERMS"

It is often more convenient to buy a car out of income, rather than pay cash.

But to do so involves additional cost. So it is important to keep this cost as low as possible. For instance, twenty-four months of financing service costs twice as much as twelve.

The cheapest and best way to buy on time payments is to pay all you can down and pay as much per month as you can comfortably afford.

Don't be misled by so-called "Easy" payments. Take time to check on all costs as well as services proposed when you buy.

A Gallant General

The whole country will join in the fervent hope that Maj. Gen. William F. Dean will make it back safely to American lines in Korea. General Dean's Twenty-fourth Division has been fighting an arduous and costly delaying action; elements under his command were given the unlovely job of holding up Communist entry into Taejon. Many of the Twenty-fourth's troops were green, and there was a high casualty rate among junior officers. General Dean stepped in to set an example of leadership. He was in the thick of the fighting directing bazooka teams armed with new weapons. Indeed, one of the last persons to see him before he was cut off quoted him as exclaiming: "I just got me a tank!"

General Dean has an earned reputation as a fighting general, and he has been in tight spots before. During World War II his Forty-fourth Division was caught in a somewhat similar situation in the Battle of the Bulge. The tall, red-haired Dean is a soldier's general who leads because his men respect him, and certainly his action is an inspiration. At the same time, it may be hoped that circumstances will not be such that other commanders find it necessary to take similar risks. General officers, particularly those of General Dean's caliber, are too valuable to be expendable.

Paying As We Go

Senators Taft and O'Mahoney have sounded a note of hard realism by repeating their demand for an immediate tax increase. From all indications now available, the expansion of American defense will not be a casual affair which can be sloughed off when the police action in Korea is ended. As a matter of elemental self-defense in light of the newly demonstrated Communist boldness, increased military expenditures are likely to be with us a long time. Though no one can quote precise figures, Senator Taft estimates that we must count on a period of 10 to 15 years and extra expenditures of from 10 to 20 billion dollars a year—in other words, on devoting up to 20 percent of our national production to defense.

Aside from shortages of strategic materials, which may be alleviated through priorities and allocations, the greatest problem affecting the economy will be inflation. Huge expenditures and full employment will create vast new purchasing power at a time when production of some civilian goods may of necessity be curtailed. There already have been signs of what this purchasing power can do when used unwisely in the scare buying and the unwarranted rise in food prices. When the economy is running full blast is especially the time to sustain as much as possible of the increased burden through taxation.

Mr. Taft may be indulging in wishful thinking in saying that a pay-as-you-go tax program would make rationing and price controls unnecessary—some of his topsy-turvy assurances respecting the death of OPA hardly qualify him as an oracle in this connection. Any number of situations could arise, including the spread of hoarding, in which price controls and rationing would become imperative. It is well to keep plans for a mandatory program in readiness. But in any event Congress should abandon all talk of excise tax reduction and follow the recommendation of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report to increase general taxes promptly and decisively.

Probably it would be impossible for Congress to overhaul the entire tax program during the remaining crowded months of this session. But this is by no means an excuse for inaction. It would be possible to pass an immediate across-the-board percentage increase in personal income and corporation taxes and to impose a reasonable excess profits levy. This would distribute the burden fairly by present standards and would at least be a start on what is needed. The conference yesterday between the President and congressional leaders is an encouraging sign that a general increase may be forthcoming.

Beyond this the compelling need is for a complete restudy of the tax program. Not only should special attention be given to plugging the gaps and ironing out the inequities, but, even more important, the tax program ought to be focused so as to encourage a continually expanding national economy. Only in this way will it be possible for the people to carry the larger burden which their defense demands. There is no way to get something for nothing in the painful but necessary process of augmenting the country's defense. But the load can be more easily carried if adjusted so as to avoid discouragement of enterprise.

We're In It Together

We suspect that the entire free world has been shocked by the strained neutrality of Emanuel Shinwell, British Minister of Defense, in the fight against aggression in Korea. Mr. Shinwell has been quoted as saying in a public address that the world has gone "completely crazy." At the same time he refused to place any responsibility upon any nation for this "misunderstanding" and "mischief." Those familiar with his political orientation will not be surprised by this crass failure to recognize aggression as such. Only last January, Mr. Shinwell was reported to have said that "he had no particular quarrel with the objects of communism." He disapproved only of the Communists' technique. Prime Minister Attlee ought to have realized when he named Mr. Shinwell as Minister of Defense and John Strachey as Secretary of War that, in case of any threat to the peace from international communism, these confirmed Marxists could scarcely be relied upon to pursue a vigorous policy.

As for Mr. Strachey, his most recent service to the cause of disunity in the free world was his denunciation of the Schuman plan to integrate steel and coal production on the Continent as a capitalistic "plot." In apologizing to the House of Commons for the speech, Prime Minister Attlee said that his War Minister had meant a plot of the Conservatives to use the Schuman plan for their political advantage. Whatever Mr. Strachey's meaning may have been, his fight against the Schuman plan must have been heartily applauded in Moscow.

Mr. Shinwell's aloofness to the cause of free-world defense stands out in stark contrast to Prime Minister Attlee's forthright response to the Truman program and to the policy of his own government. Great Britain is one of the countries primarily responsible for the United Nations' courageous action in resisting the invaders in Korea. Yet her Defense Minister feels free to slap the United Nations in the face. Apparently he places the united action of the free world to put down aggression on no different plane from the aggression itself. This is such an unreasoning betrayal of the principles his country is espousing that it is difficult to see how the Prime Minister can tolerate Mr. Shinwell in the position of Defense Minister during the present crisis. Mr. Attlee's problem has been complicated by the illness of Foreign Minister Bevin, but at least he could keep Mr. Shinwell from speaking up on matters touching foreign policy while Mr. Bevin is silent.

What is happening in Korea is the first great test of the ability of the free nations to act together in the face of calculated slaughter for the attainment of power. The objective is so clear-cut that it cannot be misunderstood. It is, as President Auriol of France has said, "to make the aggressor, whoever he is, understand that aggression does not pay any longer." In pursuit of that aim every free country with a substantial military force ought to be sending men and equipment to the Korean front. The United States has made an enormous investment in defense of the free world. It is determined to continue this policy. But such efforts must be kept on a cooperative basis. We can imagine nothing more damaging to this policy of collective security than dragging of the feet in London or elsewhere now that the United Nations' antiaggression machinery has been put into operation. Of course, there should be no thought of denuding western Europe of defense for the strengthening of the U. N. forces in Korea. But the free nations must work together if they are not to be destroyed separately. And that means subordination of comforts and even recovery efforts to the primary task of maintaining our freedom and arresting this frightful new orgy of aggression.

Trap For Innocents

For some weeks the principal activity of those devoted drudges who constitute the humbler ranks of the Communist Party has been the collection of signatures for the so-called Stockholm peace petition. It is said that these comrades have been instructed by their local organizations that they must devote at least two hours of every day to solicitation. And despite reiterated warnings from the press and radio about the real origins and purposes of the petition, the peace campaign is proceeding with considerable success. In the Borough of Brooklyn alone, according to Daily Worker of last Friday, 150,000 signatures have been obtained. Fifty thousand are said to have been collected in Maryland and 10,000 in Connecticut. There may be some suspicion concerning the accuracy of these figures; but it is not at all improbable that the comrades will make good their boast that before the end of August they will have some millions of American signatures to the petition.

It is probable that not one signer in a hundred has any notion of the true import of the document to which he has been persuaded to put his name. What he does know is that in a world where almost all crave peace war has become chronic; that all the slaughter and sacrifice of the last two wars brought no abandonment of war as a policy. He also knows that there is something monstrously wrong about all this, and that something or somebody must be to blame. Offered what seems to him an opportunity to protest, he embraces it.

Thus unwittingly the lover of peace indorses the Communist program for the conquest of the world. He is led to assert his belief that > any government which first uses atomic weapons against any other country whatever will be committing a crime against humanity and should be dealt with as a war criminal.

This, of course, implies that the use of atomic weapons would not only justify reprisals in kind; it would also call for the destruction of the government which possesses technological superiority in such weapons, either by revolution or by invasion and conquest. This point is further clarified by the Russian journalist Leonid Sobelev, one of the mouthpieces of the Kremlin. In an article in the Soviet newspaper Pravda, translated by the London Economist, Sobelev asserts that the signer of the petition has automatically committed himself to a positive course of revolutionary action. The true meaning of the pledge, as interpreted by Sobelev is this:

> I shall do my utmost to prevent war. I shall stop trains. I shall refuse to unload ships. I shall not allow my son or my husband to go to war. I shall deprive the ministers [of government] of food, drink, telephones, transport and coal.

In other words, the corollaries to the principles of the Stockholm peace petition are strikes, sabotage and revolutionary chaos; not peace but violence.

Economy Order

The President's instructions to Government departments and agencies to curtail civilian public works and cut down purchases of supplies and equipment confirm the belief that when there is a will to economize, ways of economizing will be found. It is true that the President's order may result in deferral of some spending projects that would be considered essential in normal times. However, it is many years since this country has lived under what could rightly be called normal conditions. A succession of postwar budget deficits and burdensome taxes is the price paid for prodigal Government spending. Advocates of economy have pleaded in vain for rejection of civilian projects of the pork barrel type, and urged a slowing down of work on needed projects to relieve the financial strain on the Government. If their warnings had been heeded, civilian agencies would now be operating on a more modest scale, making fewer demands for raw materials and facilities needed for national defense.

It is doubtful whether substantial economies can be effected by presidential appeals to departmental heads to cut their own budgets, since Government officials usually exaggerate the indispensability of the operational programs for which they are responsible. Efficient budget cutting calls for impartial, expert pruning of spending requests, followed by cuts in appropriations that enforce economy. However, it is too late for Congress to make the radical changes in appropriations called for as a result of an unforeseen emergency. The President's order is the only feasible method of putting immediate pressure on agency heads to adjust their programs. The success of the economy drive will depend to a large extent on the way in which the Director of the Budget carries out his instructions to assist agency heads to revise their programs. His report of progress will also afford the President an opportunity to prod backward officials who fail to cooperate.

Mackenzie King

Like his illustrious grandfather-namesake, William Lyon Mackenzie King came almost to epitomize the nation he served. As the earlier William Lyon Mackenzie laid the foundations for Canada's partnership in the British Commonwealth, so Mackenzie King, during his 21 years as Prime Minister, built solidly on those foundations and watched Canada emerge as a sovereign nation and constructive world influence. His successor as Prime Minister, Louis St. Laurent, accurately phrased the impact of his death on Sunday: "The government of our country has lost its wisest counselor and the people of Canada their greatest public servant."

A bachelor and almost a recluse in private life, Mr. King was the most unpolitical-looking of politicians. Indeed, he was more a career public servant than a politician, though he had a flair for oratory and the politician's knack of knowing precisely how far to go in pressing his policies. A disciple of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, he inherited Laurier's mantle as leader of the Liberal Party in 1919, 11 years after his first election to Parliament. He became Prime Minister in 1921, and held this office continuously until his retirement in 1948 except for an 88-day interval in 1926 and a five-year period as leader of the opposition from 1930 to 1935.

Historians probably will appraise Mr. King as a compromiser in the best sense of the term. He managed to maintain a working balance between the English-speaking majority and the French stronghold in Quebec so that Canada became more integrated. During the war he placated his French constituents by not invoking the draft for overseas service, but withal Canada's contribution in men and materials was substantial. He played a leading part in obtaining the 1931 Statute of Westminster which gave the dominions autonomy. By tradition an isolationist, he nonetheless participated in numerous international conferences toward world organization. It was his government that conducted the admirable Royal Commission investigation of atomic espionage in 1946; his regime also set an example of moderation in the emergence from wartime controls.

Perhaps his greatest contribution was his dedication to understanding with the United States. So successful is the coordination with Canada in defense and a host of other matters that today the boundary is more formal than real. Regrettably Mr. King was unable to complete the memoirs on which he was working at the time of his death, but his meticulous notes should provide a rich source for scholars.

Limiting Purchases

It seems to me that the chain store grocers and other large suppliers of the necessities of life in the food line are grossly negligent of their responsibilities to all their customers by permitting a selfish segment to purchase unlimited quanities obviously for hoarding purposes.

It is within the power of these large suppliers of groceries to limit the sale of any item or items, and if these chain stores and large suppliers were on the job as patriotic Americans they would take such action to help in the war effort, if only to preclude rationing and other controls to accomplish what could be done by patriotic American cooperation.

Why not try to get a campaign started by these suppliers to have them pledge such patriotic cooperation and to advertise publicly that there is such a limit and to refer would-be hoarders to the wholesalers when wholesale quantities are sought?

Watergate Attendance

Postmortems on the failure of the Watergate Symphony series (as on all questions involving matters of taste so intimately) betray much more about the coroners than about corpses. This season's poor attendance has been blamed on the weather, the traffic and airplane noises, the absence of costly soloists, lack of "popular" music, too much, or too little, modern music, etc. Like everybody else, a member of a minority in musical taste, I nevertheless want to present my point of view.

I attend concerts to hear music, not musicians. The advertisements for the Watergate this season have almost entirely neglected to mention programs. In order to find out the most important thing about a concert, I have had to look up the fine print in the weekly program column.

The programs this season have had little or no appeal for me. In previous seasons I have attended as many as 75 percent of the concerts. This season I have attended exactly one. The weather has discouraged me from one or two, but usually it was a case of looking up the week's programs and muttering "maybe next week." The heavy emphasis on old warhorses, on trivial items like the Blue Danube Waltz, on lightweight numbers like miscellaneous arias, preludes, overtures, used not as curtain raisers or fillers but in quantity as whole programs or half-programs leaves me glassy-eyed.

Finally, I believe that there is entirely too much emphasis on the taste for things like Gershwin and Tschaikowsky.

I find it difficult to believe that a city the size of ours does not have a sizable proportion of music lovers who appreciate good music and would attend Watergate concerts in numbers substantial enough not only to guarantee continuance, but even to warrant expansion, if a determined effort were made to attract them.

"Action On Milk"

Your editorial of July 15, "Action on Milk," is not according to the facts as I understood the testimony recently given before the Commissioners. All the witnesses qualifying as experts, except one, distinctly were of the opinion that sterilization by steam is the best and safest method known up to this time and the one expert advocating chemical sterilization was forced to admit that steam was No. 1 on the list for sterilization.

Your editorial stated that testimony showed that chemical sterilization is just as good as steam, which I deny is the case, but if this is true I wonder what hospital could be convinced of this statement and would be willing to sterilize with chemicals the instruments, dressings, etc., used in the operating room.

I feel sure that chemical sterilization will not kill spore-bearing bacteria or destroy organic matter, but assuming that this method is equally as effective as steam as a bacteriacide, it would have no effect on any organic matter and would make it impossible for one to detect this filthy impurity by the sense of smell because of chlorine present. Under this condition it could and probably would happen that milk containing any bad odor or off-flavor could be put on the market and all we could hope for would be enough good, clean milk to absorb the quantity of off-odor and off-flavor milk.

We have a fairly large dairy farm and I am not interested in keeping or adding to any regulations to prevent milk being sold in Washington produced in any place in the United States providing the high standards now in force is observed by all. My experience has taught me that it requires constant supervision to produce clean and pure milk but I feel sure it would be impossible to get our dairymen to use chemical sterilization as it should be used. If the people of Washington want pure milk let them continue to use the method of sterilization which has been tried and proven. If not, let them try an unproven method with the disastrous results that may follow.

World Precedent

I am quite a believer in the necessity of our having a world government. I heard a broadcast a day or two ago that made a great deal out of the fact that the decision of the United Nations to put an armed force into action to stop aggression is setting a new world precedent.

I think that the idea of punishing individuals instead of nations is important and of having the world government controlled by its world citizens is the right idea. All the residents of the world should be subject to arrest and punishment by the world government whether or not they or their governments accept the jurisdiction of the world government. We do not ask anybody whether he acknowledges the jurisdiction of the United States, but if he violates the law within our Government and a good majority of all the people and of all nations approve it then the world government should assume jurisdiction over matters that fall within its functions.

The present action against North Korea did not require Russia's consent or North Korea's consent. I think this justifies establishing world government by majority action and bringing everybody under it.

Maryland Marriages

I have noted with interest the letters of Msgr. McCarthy (July 10) and the Rev. Kepler (July 13) on freedom of religion throughout the world.

I sympathize with the Roman Catholics in Sweden, who cannot get married without permission of a Lutheran pastor, but one does not need to go to Sweden or Uruguay to find a lack of religious freedom; he can find it right here in the State of Maryland.

Under Maryland law, only clergymen and religious bodies have the power to consummate marriages. An atheist whose scruples will not permit him to participate in a religious ceremony has no way of getting married in Maryland.

Industrial Conservation

THE Washington Post, as a leading exponent of conservation, has carried on a consistent campaign against waste, not only of our natural resources but of our industrial resources. I have in my file a typical Post editorial on this subject entitled "Wasteful Days" which appeared at the close of World War II.

I quote from letter I wrote to the Secretary of Commerce in 1947.

"I was with WPB during the war. I had no connection with the Conservation Division but from what I observed of its activities I felt that our national economy was enriched by millions of dollars as the result of the program of the WPB Conservation Division. It is unfortunate that in peacetime no governmental agency carries on a similar program.

"I realize that Interior, Agriculture, and perhaps other agencies do a great deal in the field of conservation of natural resources, but what I am referring to, of course, is industrial or commercial conservation. This is not a completely descriptive term, nor is the word 'salvage' adequate to describe the program I have in mind, but I am sure you know what I mean. To the extent that waste is eliminated in factories, shops, offices, and even homes, the resources of the country are conserved. If metals, textiles, paper and other materials are conserved, if so-called waste materials are salvaged, to that extent our economy is enriched.

"Everyone is in favor of conservation, but who in Government does anything about it? Surely there is some place in Government where this important work should be carried on in peacetime, if for no other reason than to have a program in being in the event of another emergency."

My letter was without effect, although it was, of course, courteously answered. The position of the department was, in substance, "that conservation through salvage operations and the reclamation of scrap and similar by-product waste is rather effectively prosecuted through the pressure of competition."

The War Production Board of 1950, whatever may be its name, will undoubtedly, as one of its first acts, establish a conservation division. Should this not be a permanent peacetime activity of the Department of Commerce? Of the billions of dollars our Government spends annually, could not a few thousands be spent for an active permanent program of conservation of industrial resources?

A House subcommittee investigating the newsprint shortage was told that this country can obtain up to 500,000 tons of newsprint by reprocessing newspapers. A process has been and a plant already set up by a group of publishers. Admittedly, private industry has eventually dealt with this crying problem of conservation, but may it not well be that a conservation unit, in the Department of Commerce, elsewhere, would have contributed to and hastened the development of such a process.

McCarthyism Confounded

By Marquis Childs

Real Threat Missed

THE McCARTHY affair has ended as it began—in the mire of politics. The hope is that it may now be consigned once and for all to the garbage heap of history where it belongs.

But that is probably a vain hope. With varying degrees of enthusiasm, the Republicans in the Senate are now on record as a party in defense of the party position of McCarthyism. This will enable the Jenners, the Wherrys and the Malones to campaign on the lowest levels of sex perversion and communism with the seeming sanction of a great political party.

What a strange sound debate on McCarthyism has had. (If, indeed, it could be called a debate.) This Nation is in such mortal peril as even the blindest should now perceive.

On the near horizon the baleful light of imminent danger throws the whole scene into sharp and unexpected relief. It is a pitiless light that exposes what must seem to any rational observer a kind of lunatic dance on the ramparts.

It was probably too much to expect of human nature that Senator Tydings should have taken for nearly six months the abuse and the attacks heaped on him, as chairman of the investigating subcommittee, without answering back. Even many of the opposition concede privately that his answer was a masterpiece of analysis and denunciation.

He might have rested on the report of the majority of the subcommittee. He might have said that in view of the times it was not his intention to inflame and exacerbate the political quarrel that has grown up out of McCarthy's reckless and unfounded accusations.

THE REPORT seems to me, in its thoroughness and its documentation from testimony, a convincing statement. Repeatedly, McCarthy's charges are set out and repeatedly the absence of even the slightest proof is shown.

Even Senator Lodge for the minority concedes that in the case of Owen Lattimore, on which McCarthy declared all his charges would stand or fall, nothing was proved. Staking out a curious position somewhere between the Democrats and the Wherry wing of the GOP, Lodge says the investigation was incomplete. He is in favor of a commission to be named by Congress to go into the whole business more thoroughly than a committee of Senators could possibly do.

The Lattimore case illustrates the essentfal unreality of the McCarthy affair insofar as any vital American interest is concerned. McCarthy charged that Lattimore was the "architect" of American foreign policy in the Far East.

Events have helped to prove this absurd. Lattimore was not in favor of committing American strength behind the government of South Korea. In his book Situation In Asia, published nearly a year and a half ago, he calls the turn on the weakness of South Korea and the preponderant military strength of North Korea. If Lattimore had in fact been the "architect" of Far Eastern policy, the course followed in Korea would undoubtedly have been different.

ITS UNREALITY—its irrelevance to the peril of this hour—may well be the most frightening aspect of McCarthyism and its political aftermath. There is reason to believe that a real danger of Communist sabotage exists.

In its most threatening aspect it would be directed against what is the only real shield to the security of the West—the Strategic Air Command. If the planes intended to carry the atomic bomb to an enemy, or their bases, were effectively sabotaged immediately before the outbreak of a global war, America's power to retaliate would be crippled.

That kind of threat implies the most thorough and hard-boiled advance preparation for an underground of skilled and highly trained agents willing to go any lengths to carry out their assigned mission. Such agents will not be caught, nor such a plot uncovered, in a crowded congressional hearing room before the television and the newsreel cameras. It can be balked only by equal skills such as we believe we have in the FBI, counterintelligence of Army and Navy and the Central Intelligence Agency.

There were in 1946 and '47 some "bad security risks" in the State Department who were for the most part misfits in other ways, too. They were removed. That is the past. When will we learn that to quarrel among ourselves over the mistakes and the blunders of the past is the surest way to guarantee that we will lose the future?

All For 15 Cents

The people who grumble at the increase in Capital Transit fares just don't appreciate the service we get. The other day with the temperature around 87 percent, the Georgia ave. streetcar was heated. Ah! That's not all! In adition to the blasts of heat, there was "music" real loud and hot. And all for 15 cents.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Unprepared Because Unexpected

IN HIS report, which was transmitted to the President four months ago, the Secretary of Defense wrote that: "with the Joint Chiefs of Staff as the military advisers of the [National Security] Council, as well as to the President and the Secretary of Defense, a close integration of military policy and diplomacy is provided . . . By virtue of this system the United States is in a strong position to take appropriate action in any area of the world where the cause of peace is involved."

Lippmann

In a dispatch from Korea filed last Saturday Mr. Richard J. H. Johnston of the New York Times said: "The basic fact that the United States Army never had a plan for the military defense of South Korea other than that worked out for the South Korean forces by American military advisers, beginning one year ago, has now become abundantly clear . . . Even when the United States forces were at their peak point strength in South Korea during the fall of 1945, the only known plan covering the involvement of United States troops in an armed clash with an invader was one of quick withdrawal . . . With the United States declaration of intention to fight for the protection of South Korea against invasion, there began the task of writing an entirely new set of military plans. Army spokesmen here acknowledge that this cannot be done overnight."

SO SECRETARY Johnson's statement four months ago about the United States being in a strong position to take appropriate action in any area of the world where the cause of peace is involved must now be read in the light of the fact that until the week of June 25 the National Security Council had no plans, because it had no intentions, for involving United States troops in South Korea. That our troops in South Korea are untrained, outnumbered and badly equipped is due to that fact: that until the hectic week of June 25 no one in Washington or in Tokyo or in Seoul meant to put American troops into Korea, or had made even paper plans for such a campaign.

"The defensive perimeter," said Secretary Acheson at the National Press Club on January 12, "runs along the Aleutians to Japan and then goes to the Ryukyus" and "from the Ryukyus to the Philippines." Then the Secretary of State added that "so far as the military security of other areas in the Pacific is concerned, it must be clear that no person can guarantee these areas against military attack." By "these areas" his American audience, and no doubt the Russian audience as well, understood that he was referring to Formosa, Korea, and Indo-China.

There was, as we know, a difference of opinion among military men about Formosa. But as respects American land forces in Korea Mr. Acheson was unquestionably reflecting the views of the whole military establishment including General MacArthur. For had General MacArthur expected that he might have to put ground forces into South Korea, he would have made plans not only for the defensive fighting but for the build-up of a counteroffensive.

AMONG the lessons of this hard experience none is more important for the future than the proof that it requires long planning and preparation to be ready even for a small war on land against a tenth-rate military power. Air and sea forces can be prepared and held in readiness for action at widely dispersed places. But land armies have to be specially equipped and specially trained for each particular campaign, and that takes a very long time.

Therefore the decision to commit an army is an altogether different, and a far graver, decision than to commit sea and air forces. For without long notice, without advance planning, and without the accumulation of the particular weapons and supplies for a particular theater, land armies cannot be expected to fight successful campaigns. The Navy and the Air Force, faced with an unexpected political decision can do some improvising, and if the first experiment does not come off, they can break off the action and try again somewhere else in some other way. But land armies which have to fight 5000 miles from home cannot be asked to improvise, and once they are committed on the ground they have to stay there, and they have to be supported, and they are not available anywhere else.

WERE WE to accept the view, which now has some currency, that our new military effort is designed to enable us to intervene with land forces wherever a Communist satellite commits aggression, we shall, I believe, have made the fatal strategical error. The Korean war alone has already grown to a size which compares with the North African campaign. It may be as big as the Italian campaign, even if it is not complicated and enlarged by a Chinese war.

I do not believe that the responsible military authorities will think that we should get ready for two or three Korean wars—over and above the necessity of being ready for a great war. A policy of that kind would be to add new commitments which devoured, even before they existed, the new increments of military power.

Mr. Truman is absolutely right in expanding American military power. But if he keeps on expanding American political commitments, he will never be solvent, and he will be practicing at ever greater risks to the free world, a deficit diplomacy. For the new and extra military force will be an asset only if it is not drained off into places where the struggle can never be decided—only if it is invested where it will increase the total offensive and defensive power of those nations, foremost among them the United States, which are the principals when the issue is world peace or world war.

A Communication

Agriculture's Part in National Mobilization

By James G. Patton
President, Farmers Union

IN THE discussion, public and governmental, now going on concerning mobilization of the United States' economy, the role of agriculture is, it seems to me, being neglected. Accordingly, I am seeking the courtesy of your columns in the hope that some of the ideas that follow may stimulate thinking in this vital area.

In the larger sense, of course, agriculture and the rest of the economy must be considered together. Here, the major lesson to be learned from the past is that the Nation must find ways toward permanent abundant production both for war and for peace. The expansion of the economy now being forced by military necessity will render even more acute the postwar need for continuation of that expansion unless a major economic crisis is to be faced. In such an expanding economy agriculture clearly must play an important role.

The immediate concern, however, is that farmers will be badly hurt within the next six to eight months by inflation. Rising prices of industrial products, notably anything dependent upon steel, are bound to occur, and in fact are occurring. They will go up much faster than prices of agricultural commodities. Moreover, such rises as do occur in prices of farm products within that period will benefit processors and other nonfarmers, for the most part, since the products will have left the farm by the time the price increases develop.

We hope therefore that in any price freezes which may become necessary some means may be found for making allowance for the lag of farm prices behind other prices. This does not necessarily mean holding off ceilings on prices of food at retail, but it does mean selective controls so arranged as to permit prices at-the-farm some leeway in which to catch up.

ON THE other hand, it is our view that plans should be developed at once for expanding the production of war essential crops. One notable instance that comes to mind immediately is that of flax. In World War II, increased flax production was a major military necessity. It was achieved by a system of incentive payments set at such a level as to persuade wheat farmers to go into flax production despite the much greater risk involved, in most areas, in growing the latter crop.

It may well be, of course, that the war situation, so far as military phases are concerned, may ease off after a few months, and that it will not be necessary to go into any large-scale expansion of such crops. But the programs for doing so should be mapped out now. In addition to the agricultural commodities directly related to the military effort, such as flax, expansion of production of some other commodities may be desirable in order to assure abundant supplies not only for this country but for others.

A THIRD major phase of mobilization which interests us greatly is the relationship between an agriculture geared for war and an agriculture geared for peace. In other words, we feel that a better job could be done this time than last in making adjustments in agriculture with an eye to the later peacetime pattern of the economy. The major proposal in this field is that a production adjustment credit program be developed now, the purpose of which would be to facilitate production shifts by farmers.

Such credit should be a new type of loan pointed directly at the problem of enabling, say, cotton farmers to shift into dairying. Such production loans should be accompanied by a farm ownership loan program that would try both to make more family-type farms available and to add land to those family-farms that are now too small. We regard these as essentially peacetime programs designed over a period of years to strengthen family-farming and to assist in giving the Nation a greater production of those commodities it needs most and a lessened production of those commodities of which it now appears to be producing too much. In particular, a major increase in livestock herds is essential if the meat supply is to keep anywhere near the expanding population's demands. However, there is no good reason why this kind of program could not be of enormous help in a war effort as well.

A FOURTH category of agricultural action and a mobilization program is that of preparation for emergency in the event of direct attack on this country. At the present time we are thinking in terms of two kinds of crisis stockpiling. One of these looks to the maintenance of continued food and fiber production in the event that transportation should be disrupted by bombing attacks, and involves the stockpiling of farm machinery and spare parts, gas, oil, fertilizer and other production necessities in rural areas. These centers should of course be so situated as to be near those areas of greatest production of most-needed farm products.

The other kind of emergency stockpiling is that of storage and processed foods on the fringes of urban centers. Here again, the objective should be to provide stores of food within walking distances if attacks should make it impossible to get food into and people out of the urban centers, yet they should be sufficiently far from population centers so that the stores themselves would not be destroyed in the attacks.

Republicans Open Attack On Truman Controls Proposal

ing of taxes. Increased taxes, Taft said were being postponed, "apparently until an appropriate time"—after the November elections.

Taft called for a levying of taxes "at once," and in such volume as to put the new defense effort on a pay-as-you-go basis. Repeating a position he has previously voiced, Taft said that sort of program would in itself have such a contra-inflationary effect that the need for many of the proposed direct anti-inflation controls would be obviated.

Bricker made a similar argument to Symington in the Banking and Currency Committee.

Taft said he favored the proposed restoration of curbs on consumer credit—i.e., installment buying, now heavily concentrated on autos and television sets. He also appealed for reduction of Government expenditures, arguing that just as civilians would have to make sacrifices in their plans, so would Federal and local governments.

Taft characterized the proposed controls legislation as being so broad it would permit the Government to force anyone to perform a contract, on terms set by the Government; would permit the installation of the entire Brannan farm price support plan; would give the Government "unlimited power of lending," and would let the Government go into any business it wanted to.

Taft said he didn't think the people realize "how extreme these controls are." He added:

"There is at least a suspicion that the present crisis is being used to secure powers long desired but unrelated to present necessities."

In his testimony before both committees, Symington disputed the contention that the powers requested went further than those granted during the last war.

Parts of the proposed legislation, he said, merely clarified powers that the President already enjoyed through existing statutes.

To a complaint by Capehart that there was nothing in the draft legislation providing for the Government to return any property it had confiscated or requisitioned, Symington indicated he would have no objection to such a proviso being included, including language requiring a restoration.

He said that in addition to authority to curb installment buying, it was necessary to restrict credit on privately financed housing. Activity in construction at present, he declared, constitutes a major inflationary threat.

Symington pointed out that the inflationary trend was already so strong that since the invasion of South Korea there had been a 10 percent increase in the wholesale prices of 28 basic commodities—one of the Government's key statistical indicators.

As if to reinforce his argument, the Federal Reserve Board said last night that strong inflationary forces were building up in the economy even before the Korean crisis arose to make them worse.

Among evidences of a growing inflationary potential cited by the board in its monthly bulletin were:

1. A "very substantial" expansion of $4,500,000,000 in the money supply (cash and bank deposits) over the 12 months ended June 30. In the preceding 24 months, there had been little change.

2. Faster use of the larger money supply for spending, as reflected in a rising rate of turnover of bank deposits.

3. A $5,500,000,000 rise in bank loans to private borrowers and in bank purchase of State and local government securities during the 12 months ended with June.

Consumer credit extended by banks and others, the board said, has increased about three million dollars by itself since mid-1949. Auto buying has played a large part in promoting the increase.

The board observed that "current demand for credit from both public and private sectors of the economy is strong." It noted that the extraordinary number of houses started in the first half of 1950 should boost demand for mortgage credit as the finished houses are sold. It also means big new requirements of furniture and appliances usualy bought on the installment plan.

The Reserve Board called it "too early to assess the full effect" of "recent developments in the international field" but it said these developments seem likely to add to prevailing inflationary pressures rather than to "counteract current trends."

Symington told the committees in both houses of Congress that steel and aluminum would be allocated at once if the new powers were granted. And, he assured the legislators, there would "definitely" be other commodities placed under such controls, too, but he did not wish to specify which they would be, for security reasons.

He told the Senate committee, however, that copper and zinc were in very short supply, as well as certain chemicals and some of their products, such as nylon.

The lead situation was not so bad, he added, and said that we were in "good" shape on rubber, at least compared to the "disastrous" situation at the outset of World War II.

But, he declared, we should be not merely in good shape, but in "sure" shape. Accordingly, he said, he personally advocated a much expanded program of stockpiling natural rubber.

"Several hundred thousand tons" of natural rubber should be purchased, he said, "if it is in the taxpayers' interest." The phrase apparently was an allusion to the present high speculative prices in natural rubber.

Hill Alerted for Tax Hike Bill

range tax bill, possibly including an excess profits tax, until next year.

No Decision Yet

The Speaker said Secretary Snyder woud take it up with Doughton and George in the near future.

Snyder lost no time in having the chairman of the two tax-making committees down to lunch. He told them no hard and fast decision has been reached but he will communicate with both after he confers with the President.

Until yesterday, both George and Doughton had favored delaying any increase in taxes until late this year or early next. George said he still had some doubts about the wisdom of proceeding now, since "no immediate" revenue would result.

The Georgian said that if retroactive taxation is barred, and he thought it would be, the interim increase could not be made effective on individuals before the last quarter of this year.

Doughton Would Use Old Bill

His suggestion that the House-passed tax bill, now reposing on a Senate Finance Committee shelf, be used as a vehicle was apparently agreeable to Doughton. Doughton said he thought the old bill could be "built up" to serve the purpose.

The bill cuts excise taxes about a billion dollars. It plugs a number of tax loopholes and raises taxes on corporations to make up the loss.

George said some of the loophole-plugging provisions might be salvaged but the excise tax cuts "in general" would have to be dropped. It might be possible to remedy a few extreme excise tax "inequities," he added.

The first clear-cut call for immediate tax action to help curb inflation, check profiteering and finance the rearmament program came last week from nine Democratic and Republican members of the Congressional Joint Economic Committee.

Mr. Truman asked substantial increases in his Korean message last Wednesday but gave no hint as to timing. At that time, leaders predicted he would not press for action until late this year.

The Congressional Joint Economic Committee, however, urged across-the-board taxes immediately to put the Korean war on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Chairman Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) personally went farther than his joint group. He recommended a 10 percent across-the-board tax increase, plus an excess profits tax to stop price profiteering.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) joined O'Mahoney in recommending an immediate increase on corporations and individuals but opposed an excess profits tax at this time. Taft said he thought a war profits tax would be of "doubtful value" because it encouraged lavish corporate spending. In any event, he said, it was "so complicated" it could not be sped through Congress in the limited time it will take to act on the interim measure.

Taft renewed his call for pay-as-you-go taxes at once "to cover all contemplated expenditures" in a Senate speech yesterday.

"Those taxes would be very heavy," said Taft. "They would cut somewhat all civilian standards of living. They would interfere with the development of civilian production and improved methods, but it can be done, and it is the only way to prevent inflation by reaching its principal cause . . .

"If we can pay as we go and restrain the increase of private credit, then I see no reason for any over-all price rationing or allocation controls."

A-Bomb Use in Korea 'Obviously Absurd'

Chicago, July 24 (U.P.).—The Korean war has proved "the utter uselessness of atomic weapons in the present stage" of the cold war, the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists said in an editorial today.

The editorial, written by bulletin editor Eugene Rabinowitch, said suggestions that the atomic bomb be used against North Korea are "obviously absurd."

"Flattening the capital of Northern Korea with or without killing tens of thousands of its inhabitants would not destroy the fighting capacity of the Communist army," the editorial said. "But it would immeasurably strengthen their case in the eyes of the world . . .".

Chicago Grain

Chicago, July 24 (AP).—The wheat market, shaky from the opening gong, toppled lower in the last hour of relatively quiet dealings today. Losses ran to more than 2 cents, the near-by contract dropping most.

Wheat's inability to resist selling had some influence on other cereals. Most contracts of corn and oats ended with fractional losses. Rye did a little better, both September and December gaining.

A firm trend ruled in soybeans and lard throughout the day. All lard deliveries scored new seasonal highs with loose lard at another new high since January, 1948, of $14 a 100 pounds. Strength in cottonseed oil at New York helped both beans and lard.

Wheat ended 1¾-2⅜ lower, corn ⅝ lower to ⅛ higher, oats ⅛-⅝ lower, rye ¼-½ lower to ⅜ higher, soybeans 1½-2¾ higher and lard 8 to 18 cents a 100 pounds higher.

The speculative bulls were chilled by news that late last week the Commodity Credit Corporation had sold some high protein wheat at Minneapolis to interior mills. These were the first domestic sales since the CCC began offering wheat on May 1, but some sales from Government-owned stocks also have been made to exporters at Gulf of Mexico ports.

the people . . . who are eligible to receive these commodities," he said.

"The fact that we cannot pay transportation costs is a definite limitation. Further, our surplus holdings are in bulk units which make it very difficult, if not impossible, for school lunch or welfare recipients to use them without repackaging.

"The Commodity Credit Corporation inventory of butter is in 60 to 64 pound cubes; the cheese is in 70 to 75 pound wheels; the dried eggs and dried milk are packaged principally in barrels of 175 to 200 pounds.

"This is the efficient and practical way to buy these commodities, but it requires additional operations for welfare distribution."

Brannan avoided any argument in favor of his program for production payments—for the sale of price supported commodities at whatever the market will bring, with the difference made up in direct payments to farmers, instead of the present method.

But when questioned by Representative Walter K. Granger (D., Utah) at the close of the morning's testimony, he said that if the Brannan Plan had been in operation these surpluses would not have piled up. It would have permitted the American consumer to buy them at reduced prices, he insisted.

His only reference to the Brannan Plan in his prepared statement was to insist that his appearance yesterday was not to argue for it.

"Those proposals were designed to prevent the accumulation of excessive food stocks in the hands of the Government," he reminded the committee, "and to direct the movement and distribution of maximum quantities through the normal channels of trade. Today we are faced with the fact that heavy surplus stocks are on hand. The problem now is how to utilize them most efficiently."

Committee members interrupted to urge the press to emphasize that the price-support program, in spite of the problem Brannan presented yesterday, has been a grand thing for the consumer.

Representative Stephen Pace (D., Ga.) pointed out that "the present inflationary trend does not prevail in price-supported commodities."

He referred to coffee, which he said "is way out of line," and beef as the chief items which have skyrocketed recently in price, and commented that they are not under price supports.

He called upon the press to "tell the public that the price support program in itself has contributed in a substantial way to bringing about a sufficient supply of food."

"But for that program," Pace said to Brannan, "you might be here asking for ways to increase production in order to feed the public. The public should be informed about this."

Representative Clifford L. Hope (R., Kans.,) inquired if increased buying power, produced by stepped-up defense might not furnish a greater market for commodities on hand. Brannan replied that he had "read in the papers" about proposals to "drain off this additional buying power through taxes."

Hope then asked if controls on non-agricultural commodities, such as automobiles, radios, television sets, etc., might not release some money for food.

When such controls were on in 1946, Hope said, "consumtion of food per capita was 1 percent greater than before the war. Now it is only 11 percent greater."

"We still have a long ways to go to absorb our accumulations of food," Brannan said.

Hope demanded of Brannan what the Department of Agriculture had done about the increase in the price of bread. Brannan said it had furnished evidence to the Gillette Senate Food Committee.

Brannan agreed with Hope that the bread increase was "wholly unjustified." "Bread has gone up a cent a pound all over the country," Brannan said, with Hope voicing agreement, "in the face of wheat and no increase in labor or any other factors."

U. S. Building Plans Altered

Cleveland, San Francisco and several other cities may also be changed.

3. The Administration is now on record as opposed to the construction of the proposed new building for the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance in either Washington or Baltimore. The two cities have been fighting for the building, which will house upward of 6000 employes.

The bureau was moved to Baltimore during the early days of World War II to make room for expanding war agencies here. Hundreds of bureau employes continue to live here and in nearby Maryland, and they commute daily to Baltimore. The big Social Security building on Independence ave. sw., was constructed to house the bureau, but it was grabbed and used by World War II emergency agencies.

Top Government building planners have asked bureau officials to chose a site from one of seven different cities, all outside of the Washington-Baltimore area.

4. The Administration now is also opposed to the construction of a new building here for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, a project it approved only a few weeks ago.

These and other recent actions by Federal agencies suggest that the Government will follow a policy of spreading its activities over a wider area—a policy advocated by the National Security Resources Board. The President recently advised the U. S. Conference of Mayors:

Meantime, Federal planners have their eye on the new General Accounting Office Building that's under construction here. The structure, due for completion in about a year, may be speeded to completion and taken over by a war agency.

EXPANSION: Representative Sikes (D., Fla.) yesterday took the House floor to lecture Federal agencies for planning to hire thousands of new civilian workers because of the Korean war. He said:

"The Government can't possibly know how many new employes, if any, are required for the successful prosecution of the war in Korea. To the business-as-usual, hoard-as-usual crowd, it appears that we can add Government-as-usual," the Floridian told his colleagues. "There is as little patriotism in hoarding Government workers as there is in hoarding food."

There have been various estimates and guesses on the number of new employes the war agencies will hire. They range from a minimum of 100,000 to 300,000.

One report yesterday had the war agencies seeking authority to hire upward of 230,000 new employes under the President's 10-billion-dollar defense program as follows: Army, 115,000; Navy, 75,000; Air Force, 40,000, and Defense Secretary, 1000.

Defense officials will agree with Sikes on one point—that no one knows how many new employes will be needed. They are guessing like everyone else.

Rain Wipes Out 2-Run Homer, Phils Lose Lead, 2-1

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

MR. LUIS MACHADO, the Cuban Ambassador, extended official recognition yesterday to the happy state of relations between the Washington baseball club and his three countrymen, Conrado Marrero, Sandalio Consuegra and Roberto Ortiz.

He heaved a high-level luncheon at the embassy for Clark Griffith, other officials of the team, the Cuban players, their wives, and some nondescripts who said they were Washington baseball writers.

Povich

Senor Machado, a baseball fan himself from way back, was properly aware of the impact of his pitching Cubans, Marrero and Consuegra, on the fortunes of the Nats, and he was beaming his pleasure all over the swank premises.

"I believe," he told Mr. Griffith, "This is a wonderful demonstration of Point Four and the foreign-aid plan, in reverse. We are pleased that our baseball players have helped your team. Cuba is glad to render this technical assistance to America."

WITHOUT THE technical assistance of Marrero and Consuegra, his Washington pitching staff would be in foul shape, Griffith acknowledged graciously. "If this is the sort of mutual assistance guaranteed by Point Four, I would like to congratulate our Congress for considering the bill," he said.

Baseball in Cuba, as in the United States, apparently is the great leveler. It was pointed out by one cynical baseball writer, with a sweeping gesture toward Marrero, Ortiz and Consuegra, that "those guys probably would never be within a revolutionist's shot of a Cuban Embassy if they weren't baseball heroes. It's a great game."

It was noted that Marrero alone was unaccompanied by his wife while the modish Senoras Ortiz and Consuegra were luncheon guests with their ball-playing husbands.

"Hey, Chico, where's your wife?" demanded a newsman irreverently. The non-English speaking Marrero looked inquiringly at the troupe's interpreter, Ortiz, who explained the question. The grinning Chico listened, and turned to Ortiz in a spate of Spanish.

"He say," said Ortiz, "to tell you his wife in Cuba tending cow." He could have said 100 pure-bred Herefords, because Marrero is a considerable rancher in his native country.

IT IS ORTIZ, incidentally, who has the most secure job on the Washington team of any of the Cubans. The big outfielder is not playing regularly, is used mostly for pinch-hitting, but Bucky Harris regards him as indispensable. He's house-mother to the others, the go-between in all interviews and the buffer against all the mysteries of the English language.

Ortiz, himself, has come a long way since that spring of 1940 when he reported to the Nats in Florida as a non-English speaking kid from Cuba who didn't know whether he was a pitcher or an outfielder. Bucky Harris enlisted the aid of Scout Joe Cambria after futilely trying to ask Ortiz a question.

Cambria's attempts were equally useless. He knew no more Spanish than Harris, and got only a blank stare when he asked Ortiz, "Are you a peetcher?" He wound up shouting the question without results, until Harris lost patience.

"Get out of here," Harris finally told Cambria. "You're no help. You can't make him understand what you're saying in English simply by yelling it louder than I did." Scram!

TO NOTE THAT everybody at the embassy was pleased with the success of Marrero and Consuegra with the Nats is stating it mildly. No dignitaries ever got a more hearty reception than the two little pitchers. And only a couple of days before Marrero had guaranteed the social success of the luncheon by beating Cleveland, 3-2.

No inconsiderable feature of the event was the Ambassador's free-handedness with one of his country's finest products. In profusion, he passed around those pure Havana-filler cigars as American eyes popped at such high generosity. When one unthinking baseball writer ignored the proffer with, "Thank you, I don't smoke," he was promptly nudged in the ribs by an eager photographer and put wise.

"Grab one, you dope," he was told, "even if you don't smoke. I can use all of those things anybody is fool enough to hand out for free."

Jim Ferrier Beats Snead On 21st Hole In Playoff

St. Paul, July 24 (AP).—Jim Ferrier, the transplanted Australian golf professional from San Francisco, won top money in the St. Paul Open tournament today by winning a playoff with Sam Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., on the twenty-first hole.

Ferrier dropped a 6-inch putt on the Par 5, 533-yard hole for a four, while Snead needed a five. Snead's second shot landed to the right of the green behind a knoll.

Their Cards:

Par out	445	343	544-36
Snead, out	345	344	444-35
Ferrier, out	345	343	443-35
Par in	445	343	445-36
Snead in	445	333	444-35—69
Ferrier, in	434	344	444-34—69
Snead, out			443—82
Ferrier, out			444—81

He rolled the ball over from about 50 feet away, leaving himself a 6-foot putt. Sam missed his first try and took two puts for the five.

The two ended the scheduled eighteenth hole of their playoff all even with three under Par 69s, forcing them to go extra holes in the sudden-death playoff. They were tied at 276 at the end of the regulation 72 holes.

Snead gave Ferrier a battle before losing, which determined the winner of $2600 first prize and $1900 second prize. At one time during the regular 18 holes, Snead was two strokes behind but he caught up with Ferrier.

Ferrier went one stroke ahead on the 11th hole when he dropped a 12-foot putt for a birdie on the par four hole. He added another stroke on the 12th by dropping a birdie on the par five hole.

They got par threes on the 13th hole, and on the 14th Snead chopped one stroke from Ferrier's lead by sinking a 25-foot uphill putt. Ferrier missed a 20-foot downhill putt by inches for his four, while Snead had a three.

On the par three, 220-yard 15th hole, Ferrier's drive landed to the left of the green behind some temporary bleachers. After the top rows were taken off, Ferrier chipped to the fringe of the green and needed two more strokes to hole out with a four, one stroke over par.

Snead's drive landed on the green, 3 feet from the pin, and his first putt hung on the lip of the cup, forcing him to take a three. It brought him even with Ferrier.

They matched strokes, getting par fours, on the 16th and 17th holes, and each got birdies on the 18th to finish the 18th hole with their 69's.

On the 19th and 20th holes, they each had par fours.

LIGHTING THE WAY—Cuban Ambassador Luis Machado strikes a light at a luncheon honoring Cuban players with the Nats and President Clark Griffith at the Cuban Embassy yesterday. Someone observed that the light was symbolic in that the Cuban players are lighting the way for the Nats this season.

Game Called In Top of 7th After Clout By Waitkus

Pittsburgh, July 24 (AP).—Rain wiped out Eddie Waitkus' two-run homer in the top of the seventh tonight and gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a 2-1 six-inning triumph over the Philadelphia Phils. The loss knocked the Phillies out of the National League lead.

The contest, previously halted for 34 minutes by rain at the end of the second inning, drew 13,431 fans.

The game was held up for an hour and two minutes before it was called.

The Philly loss put the St. Louis Cardinals two percentage points in first place.

The game had been postponed from May 11 because of rain.

Pittsburgh got off to an early lead when Bob Dillinger tripled to open the first inning and scored a few minutes later on Ralph Kiner's long fly to right.

Another run crossed the plate for the Buccos in the second. Wally Westlake singled. Danny Murtaugh walked. Jack Phillips popped out but Catcher Ray Mueller singled to score Westlake.

Richie Ashburn's 11th triple of the year scored Mike Goliat with the first Philly run after play resumed in the third. That made the count 2-1.

The Phils began to rally in the seventh. With two gone, Eddie Waitkus smacked a home run into the right field stands, scoring Pitcher Bob Miller ahead of him. Then came the showers. Under league rules, the score reverted back to the sixth—the last completed inning.

Bill MacDonald got credit for his fifth win against three losses. Miller lost his second of the year. He has eight wins.

Pittsburgh, July 24 (AP).—Manager Bill Meyer and Second Baseman Danny Murtaugh of the Pittsburgh Pirates today drew fines for an altercation with Umpire Lon Warneke during Sunday's tilt with Brooklyn.

National League President Ford Frick notified Meyer and Murtaugh of the action in letters. The rhubarb cost the BUC pilot $50 and the Chester, Pa., Irishman $100.

Citation's Race Career May Be Over

Chicago, July 24 (AP).—Calumet Farm's Citation, world's money-winning champion with earnings of $938,639, may have run his last race.

"He's out of Saturday's $75,000 Arlington Handicap at Arlington Park," said Trainer Jimmy Jones. "And, of course, we don't know if he'll ever come back."

Citation worked a mile between races at Arlington Park last Saturday, and failed to come out of the trial sound. His left front ankle has become puffed with an infection, according to Jones.

"We're going to walk him for the next few days and maybe put a saddle on and ride him later. We'll try to bring him back, but it's certain that we won't race him unless he returns to his true condition. It's practically assured that he'll go into stud next spring.

"I believe the injury was bothering him through most of his California races last winter and spring. When he first ran against Noor he was giving away a great deal of weight. And by the time the weights were brought together, Citation's ankle was preventing him from racing in his real form. We'll bring him to Washington Park and just keep hoping that his condition will improve."

Citation, a home-bred 5-year-old son of Bull Lea-Hydro-Plane 2d, has won 29 out of 38 starts and finished second nine times. He has never been worse than second in his carer. Citation didn't race at all last year because this same ankle was bothering him.

He started on the comeback trail at Santa Anita last January 11 and won a 6-furlong allowance event. In all, he ran nine times on the West Coast, winning two and taking second money seven times. His other victory came in the Golden Gate mile at Golden Gate fields, when he set a world mark of 1:33 3/5. In between times, Citation was defeated four times by the Irish-bred Noor.

Citation's greatest campaign was as a 3-year-old in 1948. He captured 19 of 20 starts, and finished second to Saggy in the Chesapeake trial. His winnings that season were $709,470—a record for one year.

Opposes Cain

Pearce Faces Chisox for Nats Tonight

En Route to Chicago, July 24.—The Nats headed West with a two-game losing streak tonight, but it wasn't worrying them a bit.

They're confident they'll snap out of it against the White Sox in Comiskey Park tomorrow night, and their confidence is well merited.

Bucky Harris' crew has licked the sixth-place Chicagoans in 10 of their 14 meetings this season. The last time the clubs met, in Washington last week, the Griffs swept the two-game series.

Rookie Jim Pearce, the tall right-hander who made his major league start against the White Sox at Griffith Stadium last week, is Harris' choice to oppose the Hose in their own back yard. Pearce pitched six innings against the Sox in his debut, restricting them to seven hits and retiring with a 3-2 deficit.

"He didn't walk a man and made a good impression on me, so good that I'll give him a shot at them tomorrow night," Manager Harris said. "If he pitches as well tomorrow as he did then, I won't have any worries."

Opposing Pearce will be Bob (Sugar) Cain, the rookie left-hander who's beaten the Yankees three times but who's been chased by the Nats twice. While Pearce is gunning for his second major league win, he gained a decision in relief, Cain will be shooting for his seventh.

The Nats visit Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, St. Louis and Philadelphia before returning home August 10 against the Red Sox.

Rain Postpones Fight

Willie Pep, Bobby Bell Try Again at Stadium Tonight

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Delayed by a sudden and unexpected marriage July 10, the Willie Pep-Bobby Bell fight was postponed again last night, this time by sudden and unwelcome showers.

Confident that he'll encounter no further marital problems and hopeful for a break in the weather, Promoter Goldie Ahearn announced the scheduled 10-rounder and the entire card will be presented tonight at Griffith Stadium.

Decision to call off the nontitle scrap between Featherweight Champion Pep and his 21-year-old foe from Youngstown, Ohio, came two hours before fight time last night. A heavy shower plus prediction of more rain later in the evening necessitated the delay.

Pep, whose marriage to Dolores von Frenckell brought about the original postponement three weeks ago, weighed 130 pounds at yesterday's weigh-in and examination at the D. C. Boxing Commission office. Bell scaled 127½ pounds.

From New York, meanwhile, came an announcement that Pep would probably defend his 126-pound championship against Sandy Saddler, who deprived him of it two years ago and then lost it back to him in a return match.

The tentative date is September 6 at the Yankee Stadium with the International Boxing Corp. sponsoring the show.

Bosox Win At Cooperstown

Cooperstown, N. Y., July 24 (AP). The Boston Red Sox rallied in the eighth inning on home runs by John Pesky and Vern Stephens to defeat the New York Giants 8 to 5, today in the annual Hall of Fame game on ancient Doubleday Field where baseball was born.

Clint Hartung held the Sox fairly well in check through the first seven innings. When Andy Hansen went to the mound in the eighth with the Giants leading 5 to 4, Pesky's blast to the right field bleachers started things going. Dom DiMaggio singled and Dropo scored the fourth run on Matt Batts single.

It was the fourth American League victory against five for the National League in the series that started in 1940.

Frick Fills in At Dedication

Cooperstown, N. Y., July 24 (AP).—Ford Frick, pinch hitting for Commissioner A. B. Chandler, dedicated the new $175,000 west wing of the baseball hall of fame today "on behalf of the boys and girls and men and women of the United States."

It was typically causal American ceremony in this beautiful village where Abner Doubleday first organized a crude game of baseball in 1839.

The train bringing Chandler was late so Frick, president of the National League, was pressed into service.

Frick told the shirt sleeve crowd of several thousand the game of baseball exemplifies four freedoms of the American Constitution—speech, religion, opportunity and assembly.

"There is no wrong side of the tracks in baseball," he said. "Anyone who has ever heard Leo Durocher or Frankie Frisch knows what I mean by freedom of speech."

Cy Young, 83-year-old pitching great, testified in a booming voice that "I gave my physique, my heart, my soul, everything I had to this game for 22 years."

Chester L. Smith of the Pittsburgh Press, president of the Baseball Writers Association of America who acted as master of ceremonies, introduced six baseball stars of yesteryear who are honored with bronze plaques in the museum—Carl Hubbell, Mickey Cochrane, Tris Speaker, Ed Walsh, Cy Young and Charlie Gehringer.

Tommy Richardson, president of the Eastern League, told funny stories in an effort to stall long enough for Chandler's arrival but finally everyone gave up and Bob Quinn unlocked the door of the new wing.

Doby Beaned In Exhibition

Brooklyn, July 24 (AP).—Larry Doby, Cleveland outfielder, was beaned tonight as the Brooklyn Dodgers defeated the Indians, 6-4, in an exhibition game before 10,435 at Ebbets Field tonight.

Doby was hit on the head by a Joe Hatten curve ball in the eighth inning. He had to be carried from the field on a stretcher. His condition, however, was reported not to be serious.

The Dodgers pushed across two runs in the eighth inning off Steve Ridzik to snap a 4-4 tie. Carl Furillo's single drove in the deciding run. Hatten was the winner.

Boxing Loses Friend, Adviser In Death of Dr. Leon Gordon

Boxing lost a great fan and an outspoken critic in the death of Dr. Leon Gordon, who died last night of a cerebral hemorrhage.

For the past five years, Dr. Gordon, 46, had served as chief medical examiner for the District Boxing Commission.

Boxing was the chief hobby of this ponderous man who weighed 340 pounds and he could readily recite the results of most of the major fights of the last 20 years. He often journeyed to Baltimore, New York, Philadelphia or Chicago to see a fight.

He made an exhaustive study of head injuries to boxers and prepared a paper on the subject which he delivered at the annual convention of the National Boxing Association in Havana last year.

Appalled by the number of fatalities and serious injuries to fighters, Dr. Gordon pleaded with the various State and city commissioners to prohibit trainers, seconds and handlers from trying to improperly aid fighters injured about the head.

"They don't know what they're doing and more often than not their treatment is more harmful than helpful," he said. "Let the doctor treat the injured fighter. That's his job, not that of a cornerman."

He also suggested that Boxing Commissions be stricter in their selections of referees.

"He is the sole judge of a man's fitness to fight after the bell rings. He should be taught to be able to determine when a fighter has had enough. A fighter doesn't have to be knocked down and senseless to prove he's been injured. It's cruel. Many permanent deaths and injuries could be prevented if referees knew when to stop fights."

He was instrumental in getting the Disrict Boxing Commissioners to force boxers to take a count of eight after each knockdown. "It gives a fighter a chance to recover if he isn't seriously injured," he said.

Slump of Million and Half

Major League Attendance Off 12 Percent But Phils, Tigers, Cubs Show Increases

New York, July 24 (AP).—Major league baseball attendance is off about 12 percent or almost a million and a half from last season. Only three teams—the Philadelphia Phillies, Detroit Tigers and Chicago Cubs—are ahead of last year's figures.

Eddie Sawyer's Philadelphia team, a favorite in the National League pennant race, has shown the biggest increase, 146,049. In 138 home games, the Phils have drawn 520,617. They drew 374,568 in the same number of games last season.

On the other hand, Connie Mack's Athletics—once the pride of Philadelphia—have slipped the most, almost a half million. The A's flirting with the American League cellar position all season, are off 438,888 from last year. Washington is off 37,211 from last year.

The majors have totaled 10,478,472 so far. At this time last year the figure was 11,900,707. That's a drop of 1,422,235.

The New York Yankees, while running behind last year's pace, still remain baseball's top attraction. The world champs have played before 1,293,320 at Yankee Stadium.

The National League leader is, surprisingly, Pittsburgh's last-place Pirates. The Bucs, featuring Ralph Kiner's big home run bat, have pulled 860,991 paying fans through Forbes Field's turnstiles.

Here is a team-by-team breakdown. (The comparative attendance figures for 1949 and 1950 are based on the number of home games played this season, and the corresponding number for last year.)

Collegiate Champ Wins, 6-1, 6-2, 6-2

River Forest, Ill., July 24 (AP).—Herb Flam, U. C. L. A. National Intercollegiate champion, today scored a straight set upset over the Nation's top-ranked amateur, Ted Schroeder, 6—1, 6—2, 6—2, in the finals of the National Clay Court tennis tournament.

Flam, 22, from Beverly Hills, Calif., was in complete command as he broke Schroeder's service nine times for his surprisingly easy victory.

It was the first clay courts title won by Flam, who weighs only 145 pounds.

The 29-year-old top-seeded player in the tournament tried desperately to stave off certain defeat. Before he went down in the third and final set, he carried Flam to match-point five times.

Flam returns were brilliantly executed, and frequently, after Schroeder thought he put a placement away, Flam would catch him completely off balance.

It was a blow to Schroeder, who had hoped to use his first clay courts title as a stepping stone to the 1950 Davis Cup Team. And it was his second defeat in little more than a week. He was beaten in the semi-finals of the recent Western Tourney at Indianapolis by Tony Trabert.

Flam played brilliantly, flashing an almost perfect defensive game which broke Schroeder's service nine times and forced Ted into a total of 79 errors.

Seldom in his career has the 29-year-old Schroeder played so dismally.

Flam later teamed with Art Larsen, San Leandro, Calif., to take the men's doubles title. They defeated the top-seeded team of Schroeder and Trabert, 3—6,1—6, 6—4, 6—2, 6—4.

Oxford Skippers Win Two Top Places in Comet Regatta

2 From D. C. Tie for Third

By Happy Walker

C. LOWNDES JOHNSON, designer of the popular Comet class sailboat was on hand to award the Comet territorial skipper and crew trophies for first, second and third places for the Comet Regatta held at Tred Avon Yacht Club, Oxford, Md. over the weekend.

Walker

Winner of the regatta and new territorial champion after two races Saturday and one Sunday in light airs in the Tred Avon River was John Swaine, jr., Tred Avon Yacht Club. Runner up was R. Hammond Gibson, also of Tred Avon Yacht Club. Tied for third were Karl Gerhard and Harvey Lekson of Columbia Yacht Club and Potomac River fleet.

The race committee broke the tie for third place on the basis of relative position of the tie boats in all three races, awarding third place to Gerhard.

After the first two races of the regatta, Lekson was trailing behind the leades on points, but he mastered the tricky wind shifts to win the final race. Both Gerhard and Lekson are now eligible to participate in the Comet international regatta to be sailed September 8-10 at Perth Amboy, N. J.

The relative standing of most of the boats changed after each race with Bob Ray of the Washington fleet and defending territorial champion, tied for fourth place with Gibson and Gerhard after two races. The final race broke this tie, and Ray finished ninth, one point behind Bill Lyons of Corsica River.

The three winning boats were skippered by family teams, namely: John and Mary Swaine (brother and sister), Mr. and Mrs. R. Hammond Gibson and Mr. and Mrs. Karl Gerhard.

JACK HYDE, commodore of the Capital Power Boat Association, reports on the second racing clinic held by the C. P. B. A. to educate and indoctrinate new members on the whys and wherefores of power boat racing. It is the intent of this club to give every assistance to the beginner. Instruction covered starts, flags, timing, courses, etc. as apply to A. P. B. A. rules.

Assisting Ed Sullivan, committee chairman, was Jack Hyde, Wes Lusby, Frank Pasquini, William Carbo, jr., and Catherine Clagett.

The neophytes are priming for the next scheduled race to be held by the C. P. B. A. on Sunday, August 6 on the Potomas River between the Memorial and 14th Street Bridges, with pit facilities at the Columbia Island marina.

Drivers meeting will be at 11 a. m.; entry blanks will be available at the pits the day of the race. The course will be close to the Virginia side for the benefit of spectators.

Pep, Bell Try Again Tonight

fight, but he said here last night that he had no intention of being there.

"I signed for the fight last year," he said. "I don't know why they need me there again. All Pep needs is three weeks' notice and he'll be ready to fight Saddler."

Chief stumbling block in the negotiations for a third match between Pep and Saddler has been Saddler's insistence that he get a higher share of the gate receipts. The IBC offered him 12½ percent originally, but now appears to be ready to bid as high as 20 percent.

Pep's percentage is unknown, but is believed to be between 30 and 35 percent.

Pep defended his title three times since he won it back from Saddler. He stopped Eddie Compo at Waterbury, Conn., last September, knocked out Charley Riley at St. Louis January 16, and outpointed Ray Famechon, the European champion, in March.

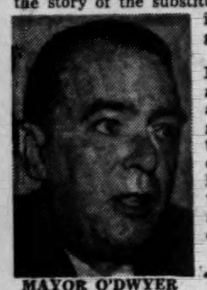
O'Dwyer Is as Hard To Figure as Races

By George H. Palmer

NEW YORK, JULY 25 (NYHT).—Probably only old-fashioned people remember Anthony Hope's "Prisoner of Zenda," or "The Great Impersonation," by E. Phillips Oppenheim. But each was the story of the substitution of one man for another, and to give it a nice balance, one substitution was for good, the other for ill.



MAYOR O'DWYER

In "A Prisoner of Zenda," an ordinary English traveler impersonated the King of a thus-far undiscovered Balkan country, and the story was unusual in that he didn't get the girl. Because of public outcry at this, Hope wrote a sequel named "Rupert of Hentzau." But his artistic conscience held good and the Englishman didn't get the girl in the sequel either. To play it safe, Hope killed his hero off, so there couldn't be talk of making it a trilogy. But I roam afield.

The point is that I am afraid that New York City is being made the victim of a similar hoax. I do not dabble much in politics, but I am informed that a Mr. O'Dwyer is mayor of the city. Well, the first time I looked up, Mr. O'Dwyer was in the midst of engineering an additional 5 percent bite on horseplayers, who already had it hard enough. Imagine my surprise a little later to see him in the winner's circle at Jamaica, pinning a rose on his surrounding victims.

IT WAS on this occasion that a noted circumstance took place. Galorettee's trainer, E. Christman, considerably concerned with the fact that she was standing there hot and steaming, when she should have been cooling out at the stable, gave the groom a curt order:

"Get that mare out of here," he said.

If you are a native of Upper Marlboro, in Maryland, the difference between your pronunciation of "mare" and "mayor" is audible only to another resident of Upper Marlboro. Mr. O'Dwyer was visibly startled for a few seconds, until the groom advanced on Galorettee' instead of him.

Last January there was a Mr. O'Dwyer who urged that betting should be made legal, which is to say taxable, on everything which walks or creeps or flies. He mentioned specifically basketball, baseball, football, ice hockey, and boxing. You may figure out which one of these creeps.

Now, a scant seven months later, a Mr. O'Dwyer remarks that it is "unmoral to run buses to race tracks where there is gambling." Later on he said, "Race tracks shouldn't be any place."

NOW OBVIOUSLY all these things aren't the product of the same man, and we may have one of those Zenda substitutions. At the very least, we have a Mr. O'Dwyer who was duly elected mayor of New York City, and we also have what the Germans call a "Doppelganger." This, as nearly as I can make out, is a physical double which varies from the original only in that it has no soul, and thus leads a confused and desperate existence, like a politician, because it knows it faces utter extinction when the original is translated to eternal bliss.

If it's the Zenda Plot, fingerprints will distinguish. If it's a Doppelganger, we'll have to get some kind of exorcist. Maybe we could trade in a used rainmaker.

While I'm being ill-tempered, I might as well go on to chew on the way racing is being televised. I do not, mind you, refer to live television, the nature of my employment being such that I never see any. The reference is to the way races are put on television in various sports programs, days after they have occurred.

THE ASSUMPTION seems to be that a man watching a horse race on television does not want to see a horse race. He wants color, excitement, drama, or something. The horses break from the gate. With the help of luck and a good announcer you get them straight as they go to the first turn. The cameras promptly leave the race and show pictures of horseplayers jumping up and down.

When the race is picked up again somewhere on the backstretch, neither man nor devil knows which is which, because they are now all blobs. Turning for home you begin, if the announcer is still good, to form some idea of the order of the leaders, but then you get some more leaping horseplayers.

In the last furlong it's pretty good again. But from the first turn to the home stretch it would be just as well to darken the screen and play organ music.

The suggestion is humbly offered that one reliable way to show a race is to put a camera on the horses at the start, and keep it on them until they cross the finish line. Childish idea, isn't it?

Gibson's 66 Low in Indian Spring Pro-Lady Event

Griesmer's 69 Good for Second Place

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

It was a bad day yesterday for Washington area entries in the Middle Atlantic PGA's pro-lady golf tournament at Indian Spring.

Out-of-towners captured the pro sweepstakes and the three top spots in the pro-lady tournament, leaving local contestants only a second and two ties for third in the pro sweepstakes, and a tie for fourth in the pro-lady.

Forty-two pros and more than 150 women golfers from three States and the District competed.

He's Three Under Par

Andy Gibson, Country Club of Maryland, Baltimore, professional, shot a beautiful three-below-par 66 to win the professional event and lead his partners, Mrs. Henry Trace, and Mrs. Jo Nelson, to two of the three top pro-lady berths.

Fener Satchwell and Mrs. C. F. Biggs of Front Royal, Va., put together best ball 64 to finish in a three-way tie for first with Gibson and Mrs. Trace and Mrs. Nelson in the pro-lady.

Bethesda pro Harry Griesmer salvaged some consolation for the locals, coming up with a par 69 to take second in the pro sweepstakes. Two other area pros, Al Houghton, Prince Georges, and George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood, finished in a four-way tie for third at 72.

Mrs. Rex Howard and George Diffenbaugh, both of Kenwood, finished in a tie for fourth in the pro-lady with a best ball 65.

Yesterday was the second time Griesmer has finished first or second in a Middle Atlantic pro event. He won the pro-am at Washington Golf and Country Club June 5 with a two-below-par 68. Griesmer had birdies on four holes, but had a hard time with his putter to bogey four others yesterday.

Crisis Delays Slum Clearance Program

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Until the international situation clears up, the Government's multi-million-dollar slum clearance program will not go beyond the paper planning stage, Federal officials agreed last night.

"It's a cinch buildings won't be razed until it is certain new construction can go ahead," was the way one Housing and Home Finance Agency spokesman put it.

The future of the vast public housing program, too, "is up in the air," officials explained, unless low-rent housing is declared essential to an all-out war effort.

Last week President Truman directed that no more than 30,000 public housing units be started between now and December 31—representing about a two-thirds cut in the number authorized by Congress last year.

Housing credit restrictions, also ordered by the White House, will probably result in a 50 percent cut of the overall volume of public and private housing during the next year, officials estimated.

For the District, the expected slow-down in slum clearance and public housing progress will be no immediate jolt since this city's program is far from the ground-breaking stage.

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young said he will urge continuation of planning studies "so we will be ready to go" when the world situation stabilizes.

The District has applied for, but not received, a $2,250,000 Federal grant for slum clearance planning.

The presidential restrictions on public housing will not directly affect the District because John Ihlder, executive director of National Capital Housing Authority, does not expect to start any of his planned 4000 units until next spring.

"If the war is still on there may be further delays," Ihlder conceded. He expressed hope that experiences of the last war will rule out mass construction of temporary "shacks" and trailers. "We have learned such building merely ly postopnes the headache," he said.

During World War II public housing was stopped in June, 1940, except on those units that were justified for war workers. Soon postpones the headache," he said. ministration concentrated on temporary housing.

On the future of slum clearance, a spokesman for Raymond Foley, HHFA administrator, said:

"We are continuing to make planning loan reservations to cities (20 have received them so far.) The plans always can be mothballed whenever necessary. But it's a sure thing no one will be tearing down any slum dwelling until things look better."

The official added that no actual loans have been granted municipalities and that all Federal assistance is contingent upon a city being ready to go ahead by next July.

This July 1, 1951 cut-off date, he suggested, might be extended in light of the war situation.

Meanwhile, President Truman has asked Foley to "thoroughly re-examine" the nationwide public housing program "in terms of the developing international situation."

More than 100 persons attended a heated, three-hour public hearing in Rockville last night on whether the Montgomery County council should veto the Public Library Bill it enacted in May.

No action was taken, however.

Chief opposition to the bill came from the county's Civic Federation, representing 65 county-city civic groups. Secondary opposition came from the County Farm Bureau, and upper county farm groups.

Favoring the measure, however, were factions equally strong, including members of the Silver Spring Library Board, the County Library Advisory Council, the League of Women Voters and a number of public citizens.

Maurice M. Jansky, representing the Federation, called the bill "confusing and inadequate." He said it gave the council "the power to take over library facilities in the already established districts either by negotiation or by declaring the facilities adequate under the standards of the bill."

A League of Women Voters spokesman said the bill is "fair, economical and a democratic measure. We feel the lines of the bill are clearly drawn, and there is adequate protection for the individual library District."

Frederic P. Lee, president of the council, said the bill merely sets up machinery for the establishing of a county library system. The bill will become law August 15 unless there is a council veto.

Takoma Park Gets Traffic Safety Award

Takoma Park was presented with a plaque from the National Safety Council last night for its record of no traffic fatalities for 1949.

The presentation was made at a meeting of the City Council to Chief of Police Chester E. Thomas by Major Ruxton Ridgley, of the Maryland State Police, and Cavendish Darrell, general manager of the Automobile Trade Association of Maryland.

Takoma Park, the men said, was one of four Maryland municipalities with no traffic deaths last year. The state had 468.

Other business included the awarding of a contract for a $6384 sanitation truck to the Takoma Motor Co., voting to advertise for gym improvements estimated at $5000 for the Fire Department gym; adoption of an ordinance providing that the mayor and a member of the city council serve on the fire board. H. Brooks Perring was named to the post along with Mayor Ross H. Beville.

Group Urges Md. U. to Take Negroes Now

Baltimore, July 24 (AP).—Negroes should be admitted to the graduate and professional schools of the University of Maryland until adequate separate facilities for them are provided within the State, the Commission on Negro Higher Education said today.

The commission, in its report to Governor Lane and the Legislature, said as many courses as possible leading to a master's degree should be set up at Morgan State College (Negro) in Baltimore in the meantime.

Other recommendations of the special commission:

1. That no further money be spent for improvement of the facilities of the university's undergraduate branch for Negroes at Princess Anne.

2. That a permanent advisory commission on higher education be established.

3. That the advisory commission look into the question of Princess Anne "with the expectation that the college be separated from the university at the earliest possible time."

'Alexandria Man's Try For Suicide Foiled

An Alexandria man, originally booked in the Sixth Precinct on a drunk charge, was in Gallinger Hospital for mental observation yesterday after he attempted to hang himself in the precinct cellblock Sunday night, police said.

Precinct officers reported Dallas C. Shaw, 29, of 1009 Bashford la., Alexandria, used strips of cloth torn from his shirt. He suffered no ill effects, they said.

Three Boys Missing in Prince Georges

Three boys were reported missing from their homes in Prince Georges County yesterday.

Two boys, placed in the home of Mrs. S. D. Richards, of Westwood, Md., by the County Welfare Department, have been missing since they left to go fishing Sunday morning. Police gave their names as Walter Sinclair, 14, and Earl Gardiner, 15.

Mrs. Richards told county police she found bicycle tracks leading to the Patuxent River near White's Landing. Neither the bicycle nor a small boat kept there have been found.

In Mount Rainier, 12-year-old Fred Morina, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Morina, also has been missing since Sunday.

He left the home at 4215 30th st., after a spat with his sister, Rita, 11, his mother said.

Some of his friends told Mrs. Morina he was playing near Queens Chapel Airport yesterday afternoon, but there was no sign of him when she rushed there, she said.

About a year ago he disappeared, his mother said. He was found then near Andrews Air Force Base "on his way to his uncle's beach cottage," she said.

He is Pvt. Charles E. Salsbury, son of Mrs. Daily F. Salsbury, of Route 2, Clendening, W. Va.

Boys' Nation Members Learn From the 'Top' How U. S. Is Run

The 86 teen-age boys brought here by the American Legion to learn about government got it straight from the horse's mouth yesterday.

In the private Pentagon office of Defense Secretary Louis Johnson they learned about Uncle Sam's military activities from Johnson and the secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

Then, they were briefed on the Korean war by Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, Army chief of information. Later, they learned all about the history of the Department of Justice direct from Attorney General J. Howard McGrath.

Last night at the Boys' Nation headquarters at Fort Myer, three newsmen were targets for such questions as, "What basic attitude of mind must be changed before world government will be accepted?" and, "Hasn't the UN done a lot of good?"

Tonight Boys' Nation politics comes to a boil with the election of a Boy President. Candidate Donald J. Swanz, of Buffalo, N. Y., said his Nationalist Party platform will include advocacy of an anti-subversive bill, backing the UN as long as it works for world peace, and expanding Boys Nation into Boys' World.

The Federalists headed by George L. Jefferson, jr., of Portland, Ore., also will advocate anti-subversive legislation, plus universal military training, and establishment of a school for diplomats. Both parties were still polishing up their platforms late last night.

This morning, the group will convene as a Boy Senate in the Senate caucus room to act on a communist-control bill and a farm program.

In the afternoon they will hear talks by Associate Justice Harold R. Burton of the Supreme Court, and Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

Prince Georges' Candidates Get GOP Support

The names of 20 candidates for Prince Georges County offices who have been indorsed by the County Republican State Central Committee were announced last night by John R. Fletcher, committee chairman.

Fletcher, himself, is the party's candidate for the State Senate. Indorsed for the Legislature are Albert R. Hassell, District Heights; Mrs. Dorothy E. Sousa, Hyattsville; Wendell Singler, Brentwod; Harry Taylor, jr., Brandywine Heights; William R. Hughes, Brookside Manor, and John F. Lillard, jr., Hyattsville.

County commissioner candidates indorsed are W. Everett Marton, Laurel; H. Wilson Spicknall, Hyattsville; James B. Carrico, Riverdale; Thomas E. Latimer, Glenn Dale, and Daniel A. Abbott, Camp Springs.

Users' Report on the Tubeless Tire, Newest B. F. Goodrich First!

Now on sale in 30 states, proved by thousands of users, it will soon bring added safety to all American motorists!

THIS is the first nation-wide report on the amazing, revolutionary B. F. Goodrich Tubeless Tire—the tire that has no tube to go flat or blow out!

The tire that motorists have longed for, engineers have dreamed of, for 53 years!

Under constant test for the past five years on police, taxi and test fleets, it is now on sale in 30 states. To supply these areas takes all of our present production. As soon as production permits, the Tubeless Tire will be offered everywhere.

Already thousands of motorists are driving on BFG Tubeless Tires.

Yet in all the time these tires have been in use we have never heard of a Tubeless Tire blowing out under normal running conditions due to bruises or impacts—the usual cause of blowouts. And it also seals punctures!

A gummy material under the tread (see X-ray photo below) seals punctures instantly, permanently. Ridges built into the tire bead form an airtight seal on standard rims. A special valve fits your rim.

The B. F. Goodrich Tubeless Tire holds air longer than tires with crude rubber tubes. It runs cool and safe at high speeds. It has famous BFG "rythmic-flexing cords" for a "Rythm Ride". And motorists report riding comfort unknown with tires-and-tubes. Yet the Tubeless Tire costs LESS than a regular tire and safety tube!

"B. F. Goodrich First Again!

The Tubeless Tire is the latest in the long line of B. F. Goodrich "firsts", each one a milestone in the progress of the American automobile. They include: • Tires for the first automobile sold in America—1896 • Organic accelerators of vulcanization, most far-reaching cost reducing discovery since vulcanization itself • Tire treads made with carbon black, which tripled mileage • Rubber compounds with age-resistors, which greatly increased tire life • Tires made with man-made rubber • Methods for making "rythmic-flexing cord" bodies from all cord-materials, for extra safety, mileage, comfort • Cold rubber, which increased tread mileage • And many other major tire developments.

Youth at Crossroads

Delinquents' Parents Also May Need Psychiatric Care

(Third of a Series)

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

MANY policemen in Washington would rather tackle an armed, hardened criminal than a youngster with a gun or a knife.

They say a smart, experienced felon is loath to use his weapon to kill, because he knows the agony of a man condemned to the electric chair. But the youngster may shoot in terror.

In 1949, there were 274 robberies and 143 aggravated assaults here in which juveniles were arrested.

Yoke gangs of juveniles reportedly were at work, and some tough little racketeers terrorized children on some playgrounds in the city.

When these youths, or various petty offenders under the age of 18 are arrested, they are handled according to an "enlightened" system designed to keep them from contact with adult criminals. The youth will not be stigmatized with a "criminal record." The cases are carefully examined by police and social workers before court action is taken.

Although any citizen or agency can take a complaint to Juvenile Court, the bulk of cases are brought there through police.

Here is what happens when Johnnie or Butch gets arrested.

POLICE talk to the child to determine what happened and why. Then, unless there is a compelling reason against it, the youth is released in custody of his parents. But if the crime is especially vicious, if the boy is apt to run away, or if the parents are missing or obviously irresponsible, the child will be taken to the Receiving Home.

In a few cases, police dispose of the matter themselves, but generally a complaint is lodged by the officer with Juvenile Court. There, the investigative-social work machinery is put to work.

A probation officer determines whether or not further detention in the Receiving Home is advisable. Juveniles over 16 may be transferred to the District Jail if the behavior is too serious to keep them in the Receiving Home, or if the child may run away. At the Receiving Home, attempts are made to isolate the wayward child from the innocent one who is there because of a parental-dependency problem.

At this point, the social workers of the court go into action, initiating a study which is perhaps the most significant and controversial part of the whole procedure.

They visit the home and ferret out factors that may have led the youth astray. There are interviews with parents, friends, neighbors and teachers. The child is given a psychiatric examination. All during this time, the child is being tested.

MANY people complain that this phase of the procedure is meddlesome. Parents are apt to become overprotective and uncooperative here. They often complain that the probe should not be made before a determination of guilt. Yet, the authorities say the court cannot function intelligently without it.

The law as to this states:

"It shall be the duty of a duly designated officer of the court to make preliminary investigation to determine whether the interests of the public or of the child require that further action be taken and report his finding, together with a statement of the facts, to the director of social work. Whenever practicable such inquiry shall include a preliminary investigation of the home and environmental situation of the child, mental situation of the child, his previous history, and the circumstances which were the subject of the information."

On the basis of these facts, the chief social worker determines whether the child will face trial, or other disposition of the case.

Only a third of the youths arrested are ever tried.

THE others are "adjusted" by the Social Work Department, or referred to the Juvenile Bureau, the Women's Bureau, child care agencies, or relief and family welfare agencies.

The newest branch of the court is the psychiatric clinic, established in 1943. The work is mainly diagnostic, leaving to other agencies generally the actual treatment at the present time.

The tragedy, many people believe, lies in the paucity of facilities here to treat the bulk of persons who cannot afford to pay, but who would be helped by such clinics.

According to Dr. Leopold E. Wexberg, head of the District mental hygiene clinic, virtually every juvenile delinquent should be "accessible" to treatment. Also, he said, parents of many children should get treatment themselves. Wherever possible, the modern method is to work on at least one parent of the maladjusted child. In some instances it is only the parent who is treated.

He cited as an example a six-year-old boy who has become uncontrollable. He is the product of a broken home. The father is abroad and the mother works in order to keep her child. The child has done badly at school and the mother is distraught.

"When we brought in the mother, we found she had unconsciously rejected her own child, and has identified him with his father. The child is her millstone. She feels that because of that child there is at present no chance for her to make over her life," the psychiatrist said.

"HER reaction was to become overanxious for the child, over-protective, and she pampered it. The boy felt the situation and fought back. And this boy, remember, has much real love for his mother.

"We have worked on this case for months and are still working on it intensely. The child is in a camp for the summer. If we can't adjust the mother, the loving child and the loving mother must be separated. We will try to find a foster home."

How much good does psychotherapy do delinquent children? Dr. Wexberg was asked.

"God is very kind," he replied. "Even without help the majority straighten themselves out. Such is the resiliency of the young personality. But there are others who need help desperately and are not getting it."

At present, Wexberg and others are experimenting with "outdoor group therapy." In its simplest form, it is based on the innate curiosity of children toward wildlife.

"We take seven or eight boys to the Upper Potomac once a week," he said. "There you can see the joy that these lads get in seeking out insects and other animals. Here the delinquents and other maladjusted children have a chance to fit in with one another, to come out from their withdrawal and live the joy of whatever they have in themselves.

"This type of therapy is, I believe, better than some other methods based on having the child discuss his problems," he said. "The majority of children do not express themselves in words. They are more apt to do so in play or action."

There are thousands of maladjusted children yearly who are never treated. In other cases often the treatment does not work. These children may wind up in Juvenile Court for trial.

Loyalty Test In Defense Bill Asked

Wherry Wants Law Amended to Check On All District Civilian Employes

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Senate Minority Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.) yesterday disclosed he would drive to amend the House-passed District civilian defense law by requiring loyalty checks of all employes.

Wherry said he was emphatically in favor of a model civilian defense law for the District of Columbia, but the act passed by the House was "very loosely drawn" and inadequate.

The measure, introduced in the Senate by Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.), is scheduled to reach the floor Wednesday.

Wherry said the bill presents every opportunity for "typical District boondoggling," instead of providing for adequate civilian defense.

The ideal step, Wherry declared, would be to recommit the bill to the committee for further study, since, he said, hearings on it were obviously inadequate. But because of the urgency of passing some measure, the GOP leader indicated, he would seek, instead, to amend the bill on the floor.

Noting that the measure provided neither for Civil Service status nor loyalty checks of officials and employes, Wherry said that, of all places where such checks were essential, it was in the civilian defense set-up in the District of Columbia, seat of the Federal Government.

The Nebraska Republican also noted that the bill fails to provide for any report to Congress of expenditures under the authorization. He said he would also seek an amendment requiring the District Commissioners and/or the Director of Civil Defense to report to the Congress.

The Administration proposes an appropriation of $290,000 for establishing an Office of Civil Defense here.

Hacker Held as Housebreaker After Rooming House Episode

The Washington Post

TORN DRESS—Mrs. Alma DelColle is comforted by her niece, Miss Leona Imperiale (left), after a roominghouse scuffle

The Case of the Purloined Envelope, a matter of much mystery when it developed yesterday afternoon, was resolved last night into a charge of housebreaking against a Washington hacker.

It started when the cabbie, Lawrence Eisenberg, 26, of 4801 48th st. nw., entered a rooming house at 1211 Vermont ave. nw., about 1 p. m.

But Eisenberg was unidentified at that point. To Miss Leona Imperiale, 18, Eisenberg—270 pounds, standing 6-3—was "the huge man" when he dashed past her up to the room of Woodrow Bishop, a roomer.

Miss Imperiale summoned her aunt and manager of the rooming house, Mrs. olores Doree, 23.

Mrs. Doree and another aunt, Mrs. Alma DelColle, 25, got to the front of the house, they told police, in time to see Eisenberg walk down the stairs, envelope in hand.

The ladies claim that roughstuff followed.

Mrs. DelColle grabbed the envelope, tucking it into her dress. She said Eisenberg grabbed, ripping the dress but gaining the envelope.

With the two older women in tow, the woman continued, Eisenberg reached a waiting car and fled.

Eisenberg later called the rooming house and tried to apologize, the police said. The women told him to tell it to the cops.

This he did at 6:30 p. m. at the Second Precinct station after having called his attorney.

As for the envelope, he told police, it contained an application for a Maryland chauffeur's license which Bishop had obtained for him.

Boy Is Witness

Pair in Car Carry Off Md. Girl, 7

A 7-year-old girl reportedly was carried off yesterday morning by a man and a woman who invited her into an automobile near her Hillside, Md., home.

The child is Virginia Lee Hoile, daughter of Henry Hoile, a painter, who lives at 6256 Marlboro pike, and his estranged wife.

A 15-year-old youth, William Pompell of Hagerstown, Md., who is visiting the child's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Hoile, witnessed the incident. The elder Hoiles live in a house in the rear of their son's. The youth said he saw the woman in the automobile beckon to Virginia Lee as she was crossing a parking lot behind a tavern next to the Hoile home. The child entered the car and the vehicle sped off, he said.

The child was walking from her home toward that of her grandparents, which is about 50 yards distant. Blonde, with long curls, she was wearing a yellow dress and red shoes.

Her parents are divorced, and she had been staying until about two months ago with her mother's mother in Silver Spring, the elder Mrs. Hoile said. Later she came to live with her father. Both parents have remarried, she said.

The car was described as a 1936 or 1937 black Plymouth, bearing Maryland tags.

Man Indicted In Slaying of Stepson, 2½

An Alexandria grand jury yesterday indicted John C. Ferranto, 20, of 110 S. Fayette st., Alexandria, for murder in the death of his 2½-year-old stepson on April 23.

Ferranto pleaded innocent to the charge and his bond of $5000 was continued. No trial date was set.

The child died as a result of "severe injuries" received the night before his death, according to police. During a May 3 hearing in Alexandria Civil and Police Court, Ferranto denied beating his stepson.

Ferranto was one of 33 persons indicted by the grand jury yesterday.

William Hawks, 27, of 106 Cliff st., Alexandria, was indicted on a charge of statutory rape. He is accused of having relations with a 15-year-old girl on October 15, 1948, and on several subsequent occasions.

Another true bill was returned against Odell L. Jernigan, 18, of 1183 Neal st. ne., charged with raping a 24-year-old mother of four children June 9.

Police said two other men and two juveniles participated in the attack.

The jury also indicted three men for housebreaking: Elijah Gardner, 27, of Marion, N. C.; Lawrence B. Hess, 54, of 1113 Prince st., Alexandria, and Robert Henry Peace, 35, of the Mutual Ice Co., N. Payne st., Alexandria.

Falls Church To Appeal on Annexation

City Council Votes To Press Its Case; Roy H. Dunn Chosen Acting City Manager

The Falls Church City Council voted unanimously last night to "take necessary steps" to appeal its annexation case.

The bid of the city of two-square miles to annex 10.75 square miles of adjoining Fairfax County land was turned down last Thursday by a three-judge annexation panel in Fairfax Circuit Court.

The city council decided to appeal the case on recommendation of its attorney, Horace Edwards, and City Attorney LaRue Van Meter.

Councilman J. H. McCarthy said, "We've spent so much money now" it would require only "a little bit of additional money" to get a final decision from the State Court of Appeals.

School Program Cited

Councilman Samuel McCrary said failure of the annexation suit would "seriously hamper an expanded school program."

Other councilmen agreed it would be "foolish" not to appeal the case.

In another action the council passed unanimously on its second reading an ordinance establishing the office of city manager and appointing Roy H. Dunn acting city manager. Dunn has served as city manager under the old city charter, which delegated less authority to the job than under the new charter.

By an 8-1 vote the council also agreed to appoint a committee of the mayor and five councilmen to solicit and examine candidates for a permanent new city manager. McCrary, who cast the dissenting vote, told the council, "You have a man on board. If you don't want him, why don't you say so."

Councilman Karl Anderson, who proposed the committee, said, "I assume Dunn would be a candidate and his qualifications would be stacked up against those of other candidates. He might conceivably end up remaining here."

Rumors of Displacement

H. S. Dean, of 211 W. George Mason dr., said he was a citizen "distressed" by rumors Dunn might be displaced, and asked a denial of such a move.

Mayor Albert M. Orme said the council really wanted "to take a look at the situation." Orme said he wished to take the opportunity to state, "Your mayor has no ambition and I believe I speak for the city attorney in that he has no ambition" (for the city manager post.)

A call by McCrary for a vote of confidence on Dunn's handling of the job of acting city manager failed for want of a second.

The council also voted to ask its city manager to investigate the cost of rehabilitating a sewage pumping station in the city with an eye to possibility of dumping its sewage into Arlington's network instead of Fairfax's trunkline.

Silent Liberty Bell

Tintinnabulation OK With Us—Let It Ring! Why All the Fuss?

The melodic bong of the Liberty Bell was silenced yesterday in Post Square.

Capt. Richard Curtin of the District Building Guards said a number of people had been ringing the bell "out of curiosity" and that he had insufficient manpower to guard the bell.

The bellrope has been tied about the clapper and the clapper made stationary in the center of the bell platform.

This throttling of the voice of freedom brought an instant protest from The Washington Post, the readers of which helped pick a Post Square site for the replica of the famous Philadelphia bell, presented to the city by the Treasury Department.

"Let it ring," the Commissioners were urged. The silencing of the bell prompted The Post's poet laureate to pen a message to the Commissioners, as follows:

Untie that clapper! Set it free!
And let it ring for liberty!
Let timid folk go stop their ears
Who tremble at its lusty cheers.
Put back that lanyard! Let it bong!
The times demand fair freedom's song!
The bell be stopped? The flags be furled?
Ah, rather let the whole wide world
Reverb'rate to its mighty shout!
Let freedom's hearty hail ring out!
Let citizens who cannot vote

Government Girls Hold Farewell Party As Arlington Farms Prepares to Close

The Washington Post

G-GIRLS TAKE THE CAKE—Old-timers at Louisiana Hall gather around as the farewell cake is cut by Paul Carrier, former owner of the Service Shops at the hall, and Mrs. Lois Baughman, who was director of education and recreation for Government residence halls. They were among the chaperones for the girls' party last night marking the closing of Louisiana Hall, last of the Arlington Farms residences to shut down

By Connie Zatkovich
Post Reporter

Louisiana Hall in Arlington Farms, home to about 250 Government girls since 1943, nearly burst its seams last night.

At a farewell party in the spacious lobby where house formals and date parties were once held, the girls came pouring back from their newly-rented apartments and homes to say "goodbye."

Army personnel and their families are taking over on September 1, and one by one the wings have been vacated by the girls. Louisiana Hall is the only one still open.

Every corner buzzed, an accordian and guitar combo played "Girl of My Dreams," and the groups sitting in booths or in lounges tried some harmonizing. Memories were rehashed and address books crammed with telephone numbers for "future" get-to-gethers.

Most of the girls joined together and rented apartments—in Arlington, if they could find them. Virginia Morrhead of Pennsylvania and Irene Ho of Shanghai rented an apartment "from blueprints" as soon as they heard they would have to move, back in February.

Over ham and baked beans, celery and black coffee, Mabel C. Ramsey of Richmond "vowed" she "would have stayed till the end of time, we had so much fun here."

The infirmary is going to be the biggest loss to Miss Clara A. Spratlin, now living at 3626 Veasey st. Nw. She has been at Arlington Farms since the day it opened in 1943—the only home she has known since coming from DeWitt, Ark.

Host and hostesses wandered around in white aprons serving biscuits and cake. Harry Hunter, Assistant Commissioner for the Public Building Service and his assistants from General Services Administration hated to see the girls go.

Mary Marella, 1617 N. Queen st., Arlington, and Jane Giunta, her roommate, thought "they should build another one and make it coeducational."

While a 45-pound elaborately decorated cake was being sliced, some of the girls were sitting on trunks outside waiting to shove off to their new furnished apartments—or homes.

Director of Louisiana Hall, Mrs. Gwenn Beeler, and associate directors Mrs. Cecile White and Stella Rohrbaugh received parting gifts from all the girls.

Grand Jury Holds Man in Bat Slaying

The grand jury acused Brown of murdering Raymond E. Lewis, 53, of 746 13th st. nw., on the Smithsonian Institution Grounds June 30.

Brown has confessed to the slaying, according to police. When arraigned, Brown said Lewis had "messed up" flophouse customers at the American House, 414 9th st. nw. When he saw him on June 30, Brown said he purchased the baseball bat and clubbed Lewis to death, police reported.

Minnie F. Johnson, 36, 36 Fenton pl. ne., was charged with murdering Ernest Dewberry, 39, same address, by stabbing him on July 9. Police said Dewberry was her common-law husband.

Welmore H. Braxton, 42, 2920 Ontario rd. nw., and Preston D. Bowles, 26, 1719 Willard st. nw., were charged with the fatal stabbing of John Anderson, 54, 1931 17th st. nw., on June 25.

Leslie Edwards, 50, 1233 Union st. sw., was indicted for manslaughter in the slaying June 17 of Grafton W. Jones, sr., 40, 1233 Union st. sw. The stabbing occurred during an argument concerning Edwards' wife, police said.

Man Admits Looting Homes On 16th St. NW

A housebreaking suspect admitted before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence yesterday that since last spring he has burglarized 15 houses in one of the better sections of Washington—swank and substantial upper 16th st. nw.

Lawrence held the man, Thomas M. Toyer, 27, of 1223 7th st. nw., for grand jury action on three housebreaking charges. Bond was set at $4500.

To Hitt, police said, Toyer admitted the burglaries.

Hitt quoted Toyer as saying he would go from house to house in the neighborhood ringing doorbells. If anyone answered, Toyer simply would inquire whether the lawn needed mowing, the lieutenant said.

If there was no answer, Hitt continued, Toyer would try the back door. If there was still no answer, Toyer would enter—generally through a window screen—and search for money and jewelry, Hitt added.

They said Toyer led them to three watches hidden inside a pinball machine in a poolroom. Some of the jewelry was found in his room, other items were disposed of to poolroom friends or pawnshops, police reported.

Senate's 'Phantom' Woman Judged Of Sound Mind

Miss Margaret Andra Russell, 44, who startled the Senate July 11 by shouting from the gallery that she was "a phantom from the past come to warn you that a fraud is being perpetrated against humanity" has been found to be of sound mind.

She was released from Gallinger Hospital, where she had been admitted for mental observation last Thursday after being adjudged of sound mind by the Commission on Mental Health.

Restaurant Group Backs Milk Bill

Drivers Union Fights Change in Inspection; Smith, Abernethy Clash at Hearing

The Washington Restaurant Association indorsed and the Milk Drivers Union 246 (AFL) yesterday opposed a bill permitting milk not inspected by the District Health Department to be sold here.

Spokesmen for the two groups appeared before a subcommittee of the House District Committee headed by Representative Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.).

The hearing got off to a warm start with an argument between Abernethy and Representative Howard Smith (D., Va.), over how long the committee should discuss the matter. Abernethy said the hearings had been in progress for three weeks and he would close hearings Wednesday.

Right to Cross-examine

Smith, a staunch supporter of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association which opposes the bill, said that he would not yield his right to cross-examine witnesses. The measure originally was introduced by Representative Arthur L. Miller (R., Neb.).

The Miller bill would in effect allow the sale here of any milk that meets the specifications of the United States Public Health Service. Present laws require inspection of farms by the District Health Department.

Lofton S. Wesley, restaurant owner and chairman of the legislative committee of the Washington Restaurant Association, described present regulations as amounting to trade barriers which force dairies to buy almost exclusively from the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association.

Wesley said he did not believe the measure would result in cheaper milk for the District but it would assure an adequate supply. Under Smith's questioning he acknowledged there had been no trouble with the milk supply until the recent dairy strike.

Union Has 1650 Members

Eugene Hubbard, milk drivers union representative, told the committee the union now has 1650 men under contract and hopes to have 1800.

Hubbard said the people in the District of Columbia receive under existing regulations the best milk in the United States. He said he does not believe the present price of 18 cents a quart is too high.

The union spokesman said his group would not oppose the Miller bill if it were changed to require pasteurization of the entire supply at local plants. Miller said he would not object

Callahan, 23, of 4018 21st st. ne., collided at 3d and F sts. nw. with a car driven by Mrs. Mae Thornton Bald, 50, of Miami, Fla.

The Bald car was overturned. Mrs. Bald was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a fractured collar bone. Eva Pack, 69, of Lumberport, W. Va., was treated for bruises to the eyes, knee and side. Effie Thornton, 48, of Princeton, W. Va., was treated for cuts and bruises.

In Assault Case

Court Upsets Conviction of Physician

The Court of Appeals yesterday set aside the conviction of Dr. Isabelo Villaroman on charges of assaulting a filling station attendant with a grease gun.

Villaroman, a cancer specialist, who said he was the personal physician of the late Philippine President, Manuel Quezon, was convicted October 13 of assaulting Connie Cox, 22, 1433 Columbia rd., nw.

The court ruled yesterday that District Court Judge Edward A. Tamm erred when he refused to allow Villaroman's lawyer, Saul Lichtenberg, to bring out the fact that Cox was suing Villaroman for $50,000 damages as a result of the assault.

"Bias of a witness is always relevant," the court said. "Therefore pendency of a civil suit by a prosecuting witness seeking damages for an assault being tried in a criminal action is a proper subject of inquiry."

The Court of Appeals also ruled that Judge Tamm erred in denying Villaroman an instruction to the jury concerning testimony of Villaroman's good character. The requested instruction was that character testimony alone can create reasonable doubt.

The court, however, ruled that this was not reversible error, since Lichtenberg did not object to Judge Tamm's charge to the jury after it had been delivered.

'Till' Acalotti Withdraws 2 Appeals

Convicted gambler Attilio Acalotti, self-styled Mayor of Thomas Circle, yesterday asked the Court of Appeals to withdraw two appeals he made last winter.

Acalotti's counsel, Charles E. Ford, told the court his client was "becoming eligible for parole," and could not be considered for parole if the appeals were still pending.

Acalotti was sentenced to serve from eight to 24 months in jail for threatening his former girl friend, Bernice Franklin, chief witness in U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay's gambling probe.

On January 26, Acalotti received a similar sentence for his connection with the multi-million-dollar numbers syndicate headed by convicted gambler William (Snags) Lewis.

Both convictions were appealed, but only the gambling conviction has been argued before the appellate court.

The court dismissed the threats appeal, and assistant U. S. Attorney William Hitz yesterday consented to Ford's motion to withdraw the gambling appeal.

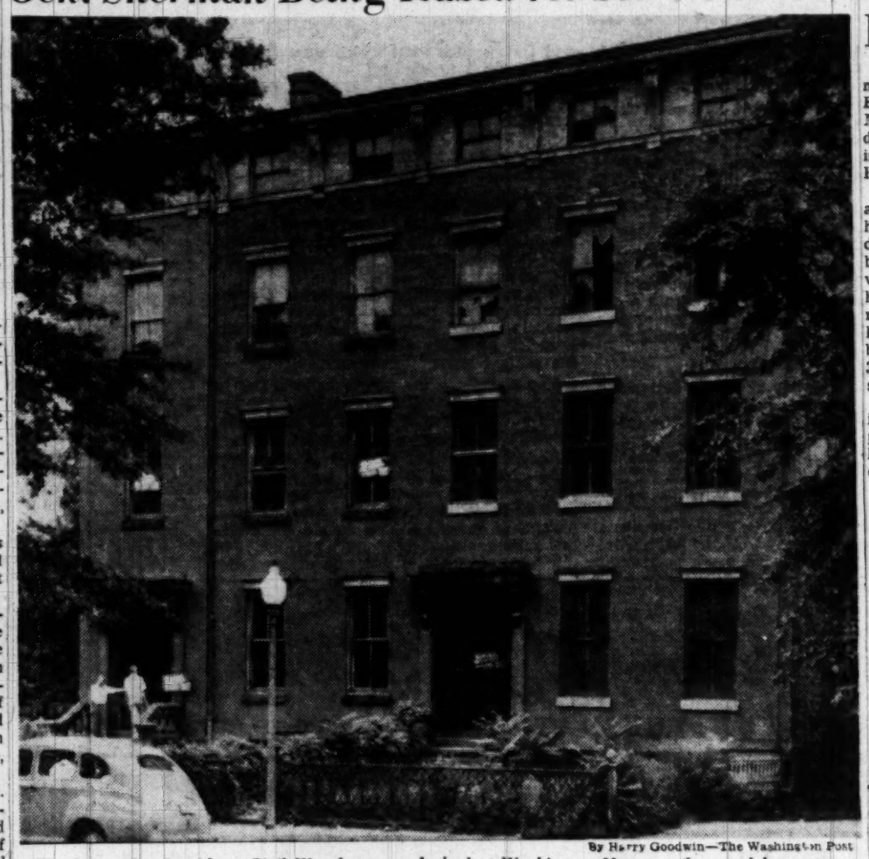
Farmers and other county residents who report for volunteer work during "Big Week" receive credits toward their membership fee for any time donated.

The fair is expected to be "bigger and better" this year, with many varied exhibts and contests and with special departments for boys and girls club work exhibits.

Former I St. Residence of President Grant, Gen. Sherman Being Razed for Store Site



By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

The home of a President, Civil War heroes and the last Washington Mayor, to be razed for a store

By S. L. Fishbein
Post Reporter

The big red building, about to vanish from the Washington scene, had housed Civil War heroes, wounded soldiers, a President, and the last Mayor of Washington.

The wallpaper was peeling, but the Victorian marble mantels were intact an dthe gaslight chandeliers worked. The althea tree in the back was in bloom and thick clusters of green grapes hung from the vines around the back porch.

A tall cabinet with glass doors ajar stood in a second-floor room. Across its top were the words, "W. E. Chandlee's Cigar Refreshing Case, June 22, 1875."

Crowbar Brigade

Yesterday, laborers in tee shirts started walking with crowbars through the high-ceilinged rooms. In a month, historic 205-7 I st. nw., will be a pile of rubble. On the rubble will rise a Safeway Store.

The skeleton is one of three residences built in 1858 for Senator Stephen A. Douglas, Senator Henry M. Rice of Minnesota, and John C. Breckenridge. Both Douglas and Breckenridge ran against Abraham Lincoln for the Presidency in 1860. The project was known as Douglas or Minnesota Row.

Douglas' house at 201 later became the home of Richard Wallach, one-time Mayor of Washington. It later was headquarters for the Papel Legation. It's an apartment house today.

During the Civil War, the three houses were taken over by the Federal Government and were known as the Douglas Hospital.

Present for Grant

In 1866 some New York businessmen chipped in $100,000 and made a present of 205 to Gen. Ulysses S. Grant. It was a home for Grant until shortly after his inauguration in 1869, when he moved into the White House.

The next occupant was Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman who also received the house as a gift from friends. Sherman added a hallway and another entrance on the west side, and the building was divided into two homes, 205-207.

In 1875, when General Sherman moved to St. Louis, the building was bought by Matthew G. Emery, Washington's last Mayor.

It was the lifelong home of the Mayor's daughter, Mary A. Emery, who was married in it "a mighty long time ago," to William M. Hannay, who is now the first vice president of the Second National Bank.

Mrs. Hannay died in March, 1949. A few months later, her husband, living alone in the big house, sold it to the Safeway people and moved to the Wardman Park. He had no regrets at all, he said yesterday.

Court Upholds Va. Poll Tax; Suit Dismissed

A suit challenging legality of Virginia's poll tax was dismissed by Judge Albert V. Bryan yesterday in Federal District Court, Alexandria.

Suit was brought by Mrs. Jessie Butler, 55, a Negro housekeeper of Halls Hill, Arlington, against Mrs. Mary A. Thompson, Central Arlington County registrar, and six other State and county election officials.

Mrs. Butler, who had not paid her poll tax, charged in the suit she tried to register with Mrs. Thompson in December 1949, but was refused.

In dismissing the case, Judge Bryan acted on a petition of J. Lindsay Almond, jr., State attorney general, asking dismissal.

The judge said there was "no immediate question of race or color" in the case, and that the complaint did not charge election officials with "conspiracy or misconduct," or maladministration of the poll tax.

The issue, Judge Bryan said in his oral opinion, was simply the legality or illegality of the poll tax. And he cited the United States Supreme Court decision in the Breedlove Case in 1937, when the legality of the Georgia poll tax was upheld.

30 Central Teachers Get New Posts

More than 30 of the 47 displaced Central High School teachers have been fitted into new assignments, Assistant Superintendent of Schools Norman J. Nelson said yesterday.

Assignments for all 47 teachers, five of whom taught at the Veterans' High School Center at the school, should be completed by the end of this week or beginning of next week, he said.

The teachers will be scattered throughout the other high schools, with many of them going to Roosevelt High School, whose student body will be swelled by students from Central.

Nelson said that in making the assignments, he has considered both seniority and personal requests of the teachers. Not all of the teachers will get assignments they had hoped for, but on the whole the new assignments will be "pretty acceptable," he added.

Israeli, Egyptian Visitors Are Honor Guests at Gay Cocktail Hour Gatherings

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

A DEPARTING delegate and a journalist from abroad were guests of honor at two gatherings yesterday during the cocktail hour. Moshe Tov, member of the Israel Delegation to U. N., is about to embark on a six-week tour of South America, and Fouad Sarouf, of the Egyptian newspaper Al-Ahram, is in Washington for a short visit.

The Charge d'Affaires of Israel and Mrs. Karen gave a reception for Mr. and Mrs. Tov from 6 to 8 in the Louis XVI room of the Shoreham. The delegate is leaving today on his Latin-American tour as Ambassador on a special mission. With Mrs. Tov he will go directly to Lima, Peru, to witness the inauguration on July 28 of Peru's new President, General Odria.

Mauricio Nabuco, Ambassador of Brazil, was among the South American diplomats who attended the party. The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George McGhee were guests. Also, the Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Nieto del Rio, the Ambassador of Cuba, Luis Machado, the Ambassador of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Thomen, and the Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Herbruger.

Mrs. Karen wore a white and black silk cocktail frock for the fete, and Mrs. Tov was gowned in black taffeta with a small wreath of pink lilacs in her hair.

Meanwhile, the Egyptian Minister, Dr. M. B. Chiati, entertained a congenial gathering in his apartment at 2310 Connecticut ave. His guest of honor, Fouad Sarouf, is one of Egypt's leading journalists. During the war he was director of the Egyptian edition of the Reader's Digest.

Pretty Mrs. Baig, wife of the Pakistan Minister, was one of the guests. Her sari for this occasion was peach chiffon edged in gold, and her little purse of hand-embroidered lame was rimmed in pure hand-carved gold. Her necklace and earrings were amethysts and diamonds.

Representative Frances P. Bolton was another guest. She was explaining to Minister Baig that women in Congress are always known as Congresswomen, never Congress ladies.

Mrs. Ferguson Awaits the Heat

WASHINGTON is no summer resort, almost anyone will agree. But Mrs. Homer Ferguson, wife of the Michigan Senator, is one woman who says the hotter it gets, the better she likes it. Myrtle Ferguson needs a long stretch of 90 or more degrees of weather, to make her really bloom.

MRS. FERGUSON

While she's waiting for it she's also nursing a badly burned hand and arm, the result of a domestic session in the kitchen and an oven which exploded almost in her face.

Helping her to pass these days of inactivity are two young grandchildren, Bobby and Bonnie Beltz whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Robert Beltz of Grand Rapids, are new parents of a baby girl.

As it looks now, Congress won't recess until Labor Day, according to one Democratic Senator. Meanwhile Congressional wives who don't go home to their families are having reunions right here in Washington.

Such is the case of Senator and Mrs. Dennis Chavez. With them for a visit are their daughter, Mrs. Stanley Miller of Albuquerque, N. Mex. and their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Jorge Enrique Tristani, here from Puerto Rico. They'll see many of their old friends at a cocktail party on Thursday to be given by Senator and Mrs. Chavez at their home in Brandywine st.

Frames Covered With Gold Paper Will Neatly Complement Colors Of 'Decoupage' Arrangement

DEAR ANNE:
I am a young lady with a physical handicap, and for years I have been trying to find something I could do for amusement and perhaps later develop a means of earning a few dollars. I am very much interested in an old French art called "decoupage." Really, it is only pasting beautiful small, colored prints on something—art paper, material, or furniture—and then shellacking the thing.

I have made a few and would like to know how to make frames for my work. I do not mean wood, but something like cloth or some material I can handle.

June A. Young,
Wheaton Hills, Md.

Here's one idea, June: There's a new gold paper that works very much like decalcomanias do. It looks like gold leaf on the front, but has a glue on the back. Several shops here sell it. A craft shop in Georgetown that has it can be reached by telephoning Dupont 6607.

Since the decoupage will appear more attractive if you have a frame with some depth, you could use this gold paper to cover an old wooden frame. Or you could build up a frame with strips of thin cardboard.

This can be done by cutting cardboard frames of various widths—one of two inches, one of one and one-half, and one of one inch, for instance. Cut a cardboard sheet about two inches larger than your picture. The frame can then be mounted on this, with the decoupage inside. Paste the widest frame down first, a narrower one on top of it, etc. Fasten the gold paper to this frame. If you like, you can then give it a charming antique effect with a glaze. Make the glaze by mixing three tablespoons turpentine, one and one-half teaspoons brown or black color-in-oil, and one tablespoon clear varnish. Apply this mixture generously over the gold with a paint brush. Then, wipe it away with a cloth in a manner that will leave just enough on the frame to give it a mellow, antique shading.

Frames built up with thin pieces of cardboard can also be covered with fabric, either sewed or pasted around it. Velvet might be pretty for some of your richer-looking decoupage work.

DEAR ANNE:
How long is frozen fruit juice safely usable after it has melted if it has been kept at above-freezing refrigerator temperature? I know that frozen vegetables must be used very soon after being defrosted but, since juices are packed in air-tight tins, it seems to me possible that they may retain their goodness though defrosted, if kept cool.

The particular occasion of this inquiry is the accidental defrosting of several cans of frozen lemon juice which were inadvertently left in the regular—not ice—compartment of the refrigerator while the refrigerator was being defrosted. The contents were no longer frozen from the sound of them. I didn't think it wise to refreeze them. Were they still usable?

Mrs. W. R. R., Washington.

Frozen fruit concentrates are still usable after they've thawed, though the flavor may deteriorate a bit and they may not mix as well with water. By the latter I mean that, after mixing, they may separate from the water again when allowed to stand in the refrigerator. As far as remaining perfectly safe for use, they will be good just as long—maybe a bit longer—than would ordinary fruit juice stored in the refrigerator. It will take a long time for the juice to sour if it's on ice. Just give it the "sniff and taste" test before using to see if it's still palatable.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

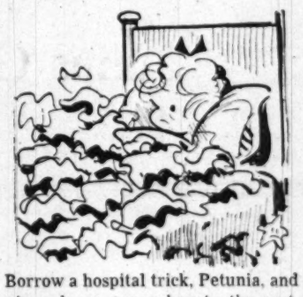
I'm puny and sick
With a cold in the head
And I'm lost in the tissues
That cover the bed.



Borrow a hospital trick, Petunia, and pin a large paper bag to the mattress. It makes sick-room housekeeping a lot easier for everyone concerned.

How to Get a Husband

Suavity Will Snare the Elusive 'Man' About Town

Third of 17 Articles

By Cora Carlyle

AND NOW, in your search for a life partner, we whisk you to Tony, the Man-about-Town who is at his best indoors. His physical strength will be demonstrated by whipping out a Dunhill cigarette lighter. With a snap of his fingers, he will bring the flame to the cirgarette between your lips. His manly encounters with head-waiters always win for him the best table in any restaurant or night club. As he is susceptible to more subtle praise than Mr. Athlete, acknowledge his prowess by an an understanding smile.

Tony usually has terrific charm and sex-appeal. As a result, he has had wide experience and is a spohisticate in the man-woman game. More than likely, he will see through any but the most subtle maneuvers. You needn't worry too much. Even if he sees through your wiles, he'll smile indulgently at what he considers a female weakness. Or perhaps, despite his tolerance of your attempts to ensnare him, he will think of you in terms of himself —that it's smart to be daring. He will be repelled by crudeness—your attack must be handled with suavity. The kid gloves must be fresh from the cleaners to be effective.

Tony's demands will be great not only in your manner of ensnaring him but also in every detail of your clothes, haircomb and manner of speech. He will want you to be gay and flippant and up on the latest story, wisecrack and bistro. Any detail of the usual routine of the day will bore him. He'll be amused if you poke fun at yourself or if you tell an incident in a biting or colorful way.

A good, new story that he can repeat to his cronies at the bar or office will impress him. He'll want every man in the restaurant to turn his neck to look at you as you walk to your table. Tony is probably the only type of man who adores an outlandish hat which attracts attention because every day is an Easter Parade to him.

This gay blade belongs to the we - must - meet - death - with - an - ironic - smile - on - our - lips school. Any inordinate display of emotion, pleasant or unpleasant, will be regarded by him as a sign of bad manners. He will turn from you in horror if you bore him with your suffering. Also, an outburst of uncontrolled laughter will embarrass this graduate of cafe society. Ah, yes, Tony must be gay at all costs but with a twist of the lips and not a laugh from the belly.

After the red cape has been waved to attract his attention, this bull can be taken by the horns and led to the altar. After you know which way his neck bends, you can be more frank with this animal than with any other kind. When all else fails, you can come out with your true colors. He will discuss frankly and brutally, the great disadvantages of marriage not only for him but for you. The ease with which he dissects your emotions will startle you but it's part of his sophistication. If you can be gay after he's torn you to bits, you've won the first round.

The battle will go on and he'll swear nature never intended him to stick to one woman. At that moment, you feel like yelling for another Matador, but don't give up! When he starts telling you for the fifteenth time that he'll probably leave you after the second month, the fray is half won.

The pattern of life for which nature designed us is good for this man as well as for those who are more willing to conform. Behind this hard veneer, is an interesting, stimulating companion with whom life can be exciting. Expensive things come high and you may have to pay dearly for wanting a type like Tony. But he can be had—If you play your role well, he should weaken.

The Hypochondriac

WELL, girls, if you like to cry in your soup, we offer you The Hypochondriac. As the nervous tensions of our society grow, more and more of these fellows make their appearance. This fairly common by-product of our complex machine age is not secretive about his aches and pains. Unless he's been to the Mayo Clinic for a check-up, don't take his overly concern with symptoms too seriously. Sympathy and a tireless ear are what he demands of everyone. You won't get anywhere unless you are prepared to spend the evening discussing the whys, wherefores and the potential development of his current ailment.

This pill swallower hugs every little ache to his bosom and considers each little pain sacred. So try to be interested in all new cures. Your discourse on the latest in vitamins will be more stimulating than the liveliest discussion on art, music or politics.

When dining, point out what constitutes a well-balanced meal and support your suggestions with an authoritative report of the necessary fat, starch and sugar proportions. "Watercress for your iron, liver for your blood and a daily intake of four glasses of fresh fruit juices"—(ahh! how scintillating you are, my dear!) If you want him to think the wisdom of the world is squeezed into your brain, continue with—"smoking and drinking in moderation are O.K., but only a fool indulges to excess." He will begin to consider such a combination of wit and wisdom indispensable for his well-being.

Your reward from the hypochondriac will be a reciprocal interest in your digestive system or any other part of your body that becomes troublesome. Never overshadow his symptoms—remember he must always be the more "critical" case. With a knowledge of basic psychiatric principles and Vitamins A, B and C at your fingertips and a hardy, sympathetic ear in your head, you can be head nurse to this noncontagious "patient."

Man With a Burden

IF YOU'RE a brave gal and don't want to run away from the man who is neck deep in family responsibilities, there are several things you can do. The most important is to realize some painful truths about him that no amount of rationalizing will disguise.

First and most painful is the hopelessness of separating him from his burdens. A person, so saddled, has received conscious or unconscious satisfaction from assuming these responsibilities. Don't try to apportion his burdens among the rest of the family. If they weren't willing before you came on the scene, they won't change because you are in the picture. This man gets a thrill out of carrying the burden for his family. The best you can hope for as the wife of Mr. Atlas is Dominion Status. Perhaps some time in the future, you can put up a real fight for independence for the two of you. At the beginning, it'll never work.

You have to face the fact that his earnings must be divided. But should a choice present itself between a modest apartment and a more elaborate one shared by one or more of his burdens, fight to the last ditch for your privacy!

Take the initiative in solving the practical end of the problems for Mr. Atlas. Find a suitable nursing home for dear Mamma. Point out the advantages of Sister's living alone and find a one room apartment where Sis can manage her own nest. Private boarding houses of the nature of men's clubs are sometimes the answer for Pop who craves skilled pinochle or a gin rummy player.

Now is the time to suggest subtly that it is also noble to live one's own life and there must be a reasonable limit to his sacrifices. Whisper in his ear of the burden that should be closest to his heart—you and he together. This burden is entitled to priority! "When you can't beat them, join them" is a rule in politics. It's also a good rule for The Man-with-the-Burdens. You can't free him of his family but you can join them.

The Scientific Type

THIS homo sapiens knows all the answers and has reduced love to a chemical formula. He's a firm believer in bio-chemistry and will invariably tell you that you're a kind of animated test tube or some animal organism or elementary plant. Just remember that he has the same digestive and respiratory systems as you have. When the weather is biting and cold, he is not immune to shivers and if he catches cold, his nose is not superior to sniffles. You may also be confident that when he was a boy, his heart pounded with the same intensity as all the other little boys when the little girl with the rosy cheeks and the blonde curls looked at him and smiled. Now, he thinks he has shed all this silly sentimentality and he can't call it love because he refuses to think of himself as a lover.

The Scientist is usually very normal and ordinary in his emotional and sexual needs. Few men have married women because of their brains, because in the great moments of life, emotion carries the day. So, when you talk of love or spiritual values and he condemns it as utter rot and switches the conversation to the materiality of light rays, etc.;—just remember that the light in your eyes is just as potent for him as for The Athlete or Mr. Rotarian.

Of course, this type will demand some understanding of his precious theories or facts. Fortunately, it is only a breathless "yes" that is needed as he drops these bits of wisdom in your lap. It is the same "yes" with a little more feeling which will answer the all important question. Very soon afterwards the mysteries of life will be revealed in a simpler manner.

Mr. Shy, Mr. Brash

WE PUT The Shy and The Brash Types together because the personal insecurity of these types is a basically similar one. They're so afraid to be themselves that they affect a mask as a protective shield against the world. The Shy man manifests it in retreating and the Brash type in being aggressive.

You must make him feel secure whenever he is with you. Whether he is brash or shy, familiarity puts him at his ease. Therefore, don't rush either prematurely to new friends or new places. They need time to be less brash or less shy with you alone before they can meet new people.

Mr. Shy is quite sensitive. If you break a date with this male wall flower, make sure your apologies are well understood and your excuses can't be misconstrued into personal insults. Your humor must never be the biting kind. Flatter him and build up his ego to get past the dangerous period where an unintended slight will wither his interest in you.

Behind this mask of shyness may be many endearing and valuable traits. As much as he hungers for praise and admiration from you, a recital of his accomplishments, great or small, can't pass his lips. Any native abilities or talents will remain a deep, dark secret unless you draw them out with kindliness, warmth and a genuine interest.

You must do the courting. You may have to telephone him three times before he will telephone you once. He may be sitting next to the phone and longing for your company but he won't be able to dial your number. He will consider it clairvoyance if you call him and help him make the date. This shy personality is able to function well and productively in many areas but he needs a woman's patience, sympathy and understanding to be able to progress in a man-woman relationship. If you can be the cause of relaxing this fellow socially, he will be so grateful to have you call yourself Mrs. Shy.

Mr. Brash can be handled best by being told frankly that he can get what he wants without yelling. Tell him his rude remarks don't offend you because you understand that it isn't his real self. Give him a chance to throw off his mask.

This belligerent horse will bolt if the reins are put on too soon. With a firm but gentle hand, you can curb this ornery beast and make him accustomed to your lump of sugar.

Nature's Cooling System Needs to Be Encourged

By Ida Jean Kain

WHEN the weather is in the not-so-gay 90's, it's the better part of wisdom to encourage nature's cooling system.

When the thermometer is high, heat is lost through perspiration and evaporation. That is the reason of taking hot soup or a hot beverage to cool off on a hot dry day. When the humidity is high, however, that system doesn't work, and a hot beverage only adds to the discomfort and leaves you steaming. On such days, cold drinks are more cooling for they require body heat to warm them in the stomach and therefore help carry off heat.

Because of increased perspiration, it is a good plan to know what is lost from the body through perspiration. To begin with, much moisture is thrown off so it is important to drink plenty of liquids in summer—cool water, milk and fruit juices. However, too many soft, sweet drinks add fuel, and alcoholic beverages also add fuel despite the cool illusion of cracked ice.

Since salt is also lost, it should be replaced in meals. For this reason it is unwise to cut salt drastically in hot weather reducing diets. There is evidence that calcium and iron may be lost through increased perspiration, which is another important reason for including adequate amounts of milk, eggs, cheese and lean meat in summer menus.

Fuel needs are less in warm weather, so nature assists by lessening appetite. For cooling purposes as well as in the interest of slimming down, it is well to cooperate and eat more lightly. The concentrated fuel foods, such as heavy, rich, greasy foods which cause overheating, should be avoided

Cooling baths are wonderfully refreshing. The dry perspiration accumulates on the skin and clogs the pores during hot weather. And remember, a nice, cool shower is actually more cooling than an icy cold one, for very cold water stimulates the body to get up steam.

And don't hurry in hot weather, particularly when the humidity is high. It is interesting to note in a science article that July is the month when tempers are most apt to flare . . . and of course that's frightfully heating too.

Our Mrs. Lee Reports:

Career Girls Scarce in Italy

By Sonia Stein

AMERICA would be the Italian career girl's dream place if there were any Italian career girls to dream, according to Elinor Lee, WTOP's director of community service. She has just returned from a quick flying trip to Italy, on Linee Aeree Italiane's inaugural overseas flight.

A career woman herself for many years, Mrs. Lee was taken aback to discover how few women actually have careers in Italy. There are shop girls, but most of them work in shops owned by their fathers or uncles. There are some professional women—doctors, lawyers, teachers—but the vast field of career opportunities open to women in America seems not to be open to Italian women.

Most Italian girls are not even trained in vocations. Poor girls go to school until they are nine, if their families obey the law, or they stop sooner if their families choose to evade the law. Wealthier girls finish school and may go on to college (which is a kind of finishing school in Italy) or to a university.

But they study only cultural subjects. No courses are given in home economics, library science, social work, physical education, kindergarten teaching or such other fields as are considered genteel and suitable pursuits for young American girls, Mrs. Lee discovered.

Noonday Sun Not for Them

MRS. LEE herself enjoyed great freedom in Rome, but primarily because she was an American of whom all manner of free action is expected.

"When I went to the United Press offices during the siesta hours to file a story for their radio wire, the Italians just shrugged their shoulders. It was a case of mad dogs, Englishmen and Elinor Lee out in the noonday sun and they weren't one bit surprised," she remembers.

And at various events where she was the only woman present, no one seemed surprised, because they knew she was an American. But had she been an Italian woman!

Mrs. Lee met a few emancipated Italian girls. One of them, pretty Cioia Marconi, daughter of the inventor of radio and sister-in-law of Italy's press officer in Washington, Gabriele Paresce, used to work in radio, has an apartment of her own and travels around in a Mickey Mouse Fiat. But Signorina Marconi was the only woman driver Mrs. Lee recollects seeing in the whole city of Rome.

She asked one man about women drivers. "But women aren't good drivers," he expostulated. Mrs. Lee hastened to tell him that American men thought American women weren't good drivers, either, but that American women drove anyway. He wasn't impressed.

Women Don't Dine Without an Escort

ALTHOUGH Italian women, sometimes with babies in their arms, cling perilously sidesaddle behind their men on motorbikes, they never ride them alone. Signorina Marconi is forgiven her violations of Italian mores because, "After all, her mother was English."

Even she feels conspicuous dining in a restaurant with other girls and no male escort. "But I saw you doing it one night," exclaimed Mrs. Lee, who was finding it hard to believe that Italian women do not go about without escorts. "I do it, but I feel rather out of place," admitted Signorina Marconi Signorina Marconi has been Mrs. Lee's counterpart on Italian radio. Before the war she did a program of fashion news, advice on beauty and child care, and interviews with guests. But no recipes and housekeeping hints. In Italy, any woman wealthy enough to have a radio, has servants to do the cooking and housekeeping.. In fact, recalls Mrs. Lee, radio plays so little a part in the lives of Italians, that she didn't hear a radio once in the time she was there. Television is not in use at all.

—The Washington Post
ELINOR LEE
"In Italy, women stay at home"

They're Up-to-Date In Use of Makeup

MRS. LEE found the Italian women very skillful in the art of makeup. "Their beautiful dark eyes and lashes were very subtly enhanced with makeup," she says.

But modern as they may be in makeup and dress, the unmarried girls of good family are still expected to be chaperoned. One girl, now married to an American CBS correspondent, remembers that when she was 20 years old her family found out that she was seeing a man of whom they disapproved. They hired a governess for her and made her pay for the governess out of her own spending money. The governess's job was to keep the young lady from seeing the young man of whom her family disapproved. But the young lady fixed that: She introduced him by another name—that of a young gentleman of whom the family heartily approved. The governess beamed her pleasure and the romance continued unabated.

For any career woman brought up in the United States where there are equal job opportunities and girls are trai ed for them, it's almost impossible to believe the situation in Italy, says Mrs. Lee. "And," she continued with a smile, "American girls who live alone or in pairs and have dates without chaperones probably can't bring themselves to believe it. It would be too awful."

Another Moon

If only there were days enough . . . To live my life for you . . . I would do everything I could . . . To make your dream come true . . . But now so many moons have gone . . . Beyond the passing sea . . . That we have melted in the mist . . . Of time and memory . . . I can not hold your gentle hand . . . Or gaze into your eyes . . . I can not touch your smallest tear . . . Or try to sympathize . . . I can not walk beside you when . . . The rain is on the grass . . . Or ever find your image in . . . The clearest looking-glass . . . But I can only wait and pray . . . And hope that somewhere soon . . . You will come back to me and there . . . Will be another moon.

The Actor-Manager Is a Rare Bird

By Richard L. Coe

AN ACTOR-MANAGER is about as rare as a well-informed Russian, but tonight, the eve of Bernard Shaw's ninety-fourth birthday, we get one of those all but extinct birds when Maurice Evans arrives in his own production of Shaw's "The Devil's Disciple."

There was a time when producers were something more than collectors of angels. They used to manage not only their own companies, they also kept those companies together over a span of years, developing new talents and writers.

The English-born Evans (he's now an American, served as a major United States Army during the war) has managed to make a success of this highly specialized field. Last night Sam Wanamaker made a stab in this direction with the opening of a "Festival Season" at New York's Fulton Theater and his second play, Ibsen's "The Lady From the Sea," with Luise Rainier, will be along at Olney next week. Another of the type is Katharine Cornell, who always appears in her own productions.

Evans' latest success—and it was a hearty one—was his supervision of the New York City Center of Music and Drama. His management made the municipally-sponsored, popular-priced drama in the large, awkward Mecca Temple a real hit and it is his final production for that eight-week series we'll see tonight.

After a start in amateur plays, he moved into the English provincial theaters and hit the toney West End area as a polite player. In 1934 he made the move that changed the course of his acting career, just as it has for such as Gielgud, Olivier, Richardson and Alec Guinness. He joined the Old Vic.

Though he played there only a season, it was filled with great parts and considerable success, "Richard II," "Hippolytus," "Much Ado" and the full-length "Hamlet" among them. The Old Vic audiences created their own stars and when Miss Cornell searched for a Romeo, she found him in the young star of Waterloo Road.

And here in America he has stayed, playing some of his Old Vic roles in tours across the land, introducing one Old Vic play he didn't originally appear in—"St. Helena"—and carving out a name that has already sold out the Olney for this week.

While Evans is not of the "great" actor rank, his shrewd drive as a manager has given him a unique position. Only "St. Helena" and "The Browning Version" have failed to hit the jackpot and it's interesting to note that both were by young, modern playwrights, the term "young" designating half the years of his profitable friend, Mr. Shaw.

By sticking safely to Shakespeare and Shaw (and only the most playable of both), he has made his name. Greater players are inclined not to enthuse over Evans as an actor, but when it comes to his managerial prowess, they give him a respectful bow.

The profession of actor-manager is indeed a rewarding one—viz Britain's Gielgud, Olivier, John Clements and Donald Wolfit. One mark of the American theater is that few since Walter Hampden have worked at it and Evans' canny success in the field is surely the reason for his enviable position in our theater of today.

THE WEEK'S OPENINGS: Apart from Olney, the summer playspots are at the top of the summer.

The McLean Theater promises a week of "Petticoat Fever" starting tonight, with Gordon Sterne, Frank MacIntosh and Frances Keiran in the leads.

"Peg o' My Heart" opens tonight at Collingwood.

Cross Roads has a real Bailey's novelty—three short plays by Tennessee Williams, under the general title "American Blues." . . . The plays are "Ten Blocks on the Camino Real," "The Case of the Crushed Petunias" and "The Long Stay but Short."

TONIGHT also brings the opening of that new "Canvas Theater" at Silver Spring, with an orignal musical comedy from its producers, "How on Earth!"

ARENA STAGE has announced its first play, opening Wednesday night August 16: "She Stoops to Conquer." . . . The Oliver Goldsmith classic comedy will be played by Ionia Zelenka, Virginia Thurston, Dorothea Jackson, Henry Danilowicz, Lester Rawlins, Henry Oliver and Stuart Smith, with Edward Mangum directing. . . The box office at the Hippodrome, redesigned to accommodate the central staging, will open this Friday, to be open daily from noon till 9. . . . Seats will be $1.90 for evening performance, $1.50 for matinees; central staging means that no seat will be more than seven rows from the players.

SIDNEY LUST'S latest, the Viers Mill Theater, will open Thursday, August 3, with "The Good Humor Man." . . . The new house between Wheaton and Rockville promises air conditioning, a parking lot for 500 cars and the new Bodiform chairs throughout the house.

A FAVORITE RETURNS—"Henry V," one of the most unexpected popular successes of the screen, comes back to the Playhouse tomorrow for a two-week stay. Here, as all must recognize, are Lawrence Olivier as Henry and Renee Asherson, his Princess Katherine

Former Rep. Thomas Loses Parole Bid

J. Parnell Thomas, former New Jersey congressman who headed the House Un-American Activities Committee during a stormy two years, lost his bid for parole from a Federal prison yesterday.

Charged with padding his office payroll, Thomas was sentenced to serve six to 18 months. He has been a prisoner at the Federal correctional institution at Danbury, Conn., for seven and a half months.

The U. S. Parole Board, as usual, gave no reason for rejecting his parole bid.

Members noted in reply to newsmen's questions, however, that no arrangements have been made for paying a $10,000 fine imposed on Thomas when he was sentenced last December 9.

William H. Collins, local attorney who represented Thomas at his brief trial last December, has said he understands the former representative is unable to pay the $10,000 fine.

Thomas, reportedly tending a flock of chickens at Danbury, has been eligible for parole since June 8.

His maximum term is due to expire June 8, 1951. But with good behavior allowances, he could go free next February 20.

Louisville Alderman To Ask Loyalty Oaths

Mayor Charles Farnsley said: "If the aldermen approve the ordinance, I'll sign it. Personally I favor a loyalty oath for all citizens."

'Held' at Embassy

Bishop Byrne With British At Seoul

THE MOST REV. PATRICK J. BYRNE
. . . Reported safe in Seoul

The Most Rev. Patrick James Byrne, apostolic delegate to Korea and a native of Washington, was reported yesterday as "being held" in the British Embassy at Seoul.

Bishop Byrne remained in Seoul when it fell to North Korean troops. Since then, his whereabouts have not been reported.

But an Associated Press dispatch from the Vatican City yesterday quoted the Congregation for the Propagation of the Faith as learning that the bishop, his secretary, the Rev. William Booth, and Anglican Bishop Cooper were all held in the embassy. (The Congregation for the Propagation of the Faith sponsors the Korean delegation.)

Bishop Byrne as a young priest opened the original mission territory for the Maryknoll Fathers in North Korea. He has dedicated his life to Catholic mission work in the Far East.

Born in Washington in 1888, he attended St. Charles College, Ellicott City, Md. He was ordained at St. Mary's Seminary in Baltimore in 1915 and a week later joined the Maryknoll Fathers.

He was named visitator apostolic to Korea with powers of an apostolic delegate in August, 1947, at the time being superior of the Maryknoll Fathers in the Kyoto prefecture in Japan.

He was named Apostolic Delegate and Titular Bishop of Gazera by Pope Pius XII in April, 1949.

Bishop Byrne has a brother and sister living in Washington, John F. Byrne, of 7615 13th st. and Mrs. David Braun, 2101 New Hampshire ave. nw. He has another sister, Mrs. William D. Ryan, of Kansas City, Mo., and two other brothers, Frank M., of Jackson Heights, N. Y., and George A. Byrne, of Brooklyn.

Political attention of the Nation shifts back to Oklahoma today for the second and final round between Senator Elmer Thomas and Representative Mike Monroney.

The fighting in Korea and prohibition in Oklahoma have become major issues in their runoff primary for the Democratic senatorial nomination. The result is regarded by many observers as a tossup.

Local issues dominate Democratic primary contests in three Southern States which vote today. They are Arkansas, Louisiana and South Carolina.

In Arkansas, chief attention centers on the gubernatorial race between incumbent Sidney McMath, a supporter of the Truman Administration, and former Gov. Ben Laney, a leader of anti-Truman Southern Democrats. Democratic Senator William Fulbright is unopposed for renomination.

Long Has 2 Opponents

In Louisiana, Senator Russell B. Long has two opponents. They are Malcolm Lafargue, a Shreveport attorney, and former Representative Newt V. Mills, Monroe real estate man. Long elected two years ago to fill an unexpired term, is seeking another six years.

In South Carolina, Representatives James B. Hare and Hugo S. Sims meet former House members W. J. Bryan Dorn and John J. Riley, respectively, in Democratic runoffs.

Oklahoma Democrats will also nominate a gubernatorial candidate today. Johnson Murray, son of former Governor William H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray, led the field in the first primary. His opponent is William O. Coe, Oklahoma City attorney.

The Oklahoma vote is expected to be about 400,000, compared with the 507,936 cast in the first primary.

Principal attention is on the race between Thomas, stately 73-year-old who has been a member of the Senate since 1927, and Monroney, 48, a House member for the last 12 years. Both are in Washington and planned to vote by mail ballot.

Korean Fighting Made Issue

Monroney led Thomas in the first primary on July 4, but there were five other candidates in the field and he failed to obtain the required majority.

Since then, Monroney has made Thomas' record as chairman of the Senate Military Appropriations subcommittee an issue. He contends that United States reverses in the Korean fighting can be traced to failure to provide enough and the right kind of funds.

Oklahoma's United Dry Forces supported an also-ran in the first primary but now are on disputed record as favoring Thomas. Neither Thomas nor Monroney claims to be a personal teetotaler. Oklahoma is legally dry.

Officials of the United Drys disagree as to whether there has been any formal indorsement of Thomas.

Too Many 'Half-Die' at Work

EDITOR'S NOTE: Thousands of Americans, says Dr. Steincrohn, are unconsciously killing themselves. This article is the third of a series condensed from the book, "How to Stop Killing Yourself," just published by Wilfred Funk, Inc. The author is a specialist in internal medicine and a former chief of staff of Mount Sinai Hospital in Hartford, Conn.

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M. D.

CHAPTER THREE

There are three classes of men: Those who enjoy their work, those who tolerate it as a means of survival, and those who die every day in the working.

Heaven has blessed the first; the devil has cursed the last lot. As for the middle group, they are the forgotten men.

You either live whole hog or not at all. Probably you have known people you might fit into any one of the three classes.

The other day I discharged a 70-year-old man from the hospital. He had had pneumonia. The most difficult part of my job was convincing him to stay in bed for a few days.

He had never been ill before. Bed was anthema. Not so much because he didn't like the hospital itself but because he was restless while away from his work.

Fulfilling His Destiny?

He is a grocery store keeper. He and his wife have served their neighborhod for 35 years.

This man fully believes he is fulfilling his destiny in running his little store. All those years he and his wife have worked side by side counting out eggs, passing out bread across the counter, measuring vegetables, and handing over tins of soup and fish.

He is at his store at 6:30 in the morning and turns out the lights at 10 at night.

"Isn't it tiresome?" his friends ask. "Don't you wish you were doing something more creative or constructive? Don't you long to make enough money to be able to sell the store and take a well-earned rest? Wouldn't you at least like shorter hours?"

His answer is "No." As it happens, he has enough money to retire—at least for the few years he and his wife have remaining. No he won't give it up because it is life—and his wife's. But his, especially.

An Ear for Troubles

He loves people. He wanted to get out of the hospital so that he could be with the people who came in every day.

"I like to talk to people and to listen to them," he told me. "I want them to bring me their troubles and problems. Some people have an ear and heart for music. God gave me an ear and heart for people's troubles. And they feel it. That's why they come in to talk to me. They know I'll listen and advise and try to cheer them up."

I said to him, "The world lost what might have been one of its finest doctors, one of its most outstanding psychiatrists, when you went into the grocery business."

He smiled. I could imagine what he was thinking. In his lifetime he had done as much for human beings as he might have if he had been a professional advisor.

Usually we see this love of work in those of creative bent: inventors, artists, musicians. They must be torn away from their work to eat, rest and sleep. Yet I have seen the happy workman as plumber, carpenter, or gardener.

The largest group might be called the neutral workers. They are the massive body of drones who leave their little hives on time every morning and leave their work on time at evening—happy at the conclusion of another workday.

They do not resent the clatter of the alarm in the morning. They do not jump out with alacrity and keen expectation of the day's labor, but neither do they pull the covers over their heads and berate themselves as fools in continuing in their present job.

Work, for them, is but a means to an end: that they may raise a family and enjoy themselves away from work. They are not to be pitied or envied. In a way, they are the human robots of modern civilization.

Those "Killed" By Work

We come at last to the group which is perhaps larger than we realize. Unless these persons do something about it, they go about partially killing themselves.

Their daily lives have none of the satisfaction that comes from good work; their existences are never seasoned with pleasant sauce concocted from the mixture of gratifying work and contributions to the community in which they live.

For years I knew a pharmacist who worked only to make enough to retire. He was a horticulturist by preference.

When he was 55, I said, "Now is the time. Sell your store. Your family is grown and married. Live." He said he would do something about it soon.

Ten years later this smiling man came into my office.

"It's done at last," he said. I had never seen him smile in all the years I had known him. Yes, at last he was happy. Unfortunately, he did not live long enough to feel the earth run through his fingers. He had waited too long—as many of us do.

It is not advisable to wait until something better comes along. Unfortunately, most of us have been affected by the saying that "a rolling stone gathers no moss."

Yet a study of the lives of successful men shows that many of them went from job to job until they found one which they suited, and that suited them. Only when they found what they really liked was their road to professional, business, or creative success assured.

Job Changes Are Difficult

A man unhappy in his job should allow no other consideration to undermine his resolve to change. Granted, it is easier to find a square hole for a square peg when one is younger. It is often a nerve-shattering, back-breaking experience for the man in his late fifties or sixties.

If you are young, if you dislike your job and feel that you are not getting anywhere, cast off and away to something you may like. Only the rolling stone, provided it does not roll forever, can find a more suitable resting place to conform to its dimensions.

I have seen unhappy doctors who became happy businessmen; unhappy businessmen who began the study of medicine at thirty.

There is a place for everyone. Each place takes finding and a certain amount of philosophy and courage in the seeker. Too many half-die in their living. For many the remedy is change of work.

N. Y. State Guard Is Activated as Replacement Unit

Albany, N. Y., July 24 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey today ordered activation of a New York State Guard to supplement the New York National Guard.

Maj. Gen. Karl F. Hausauer, NYNG commander, was designated commanding general of the new State Guard.

Dewey said the State Guard would be organized on a replacement basis, to take over for NYNG units called into Federal service.

The Governor added, however, that no State Guard units would be organized at this time to replace 10 nondivisional NYNG units that have been alerted for a call to Federal service on or after August 14.

Dewey asked legislative leaders to authorize a certificate of necessity to spend $500,000 of State reserve funds on the State Guard program.

Battle Refuses Clemency for 7 in Rape Case

Richmond, Va., July 24 (AP).—Governor Battle tonight refused executive clemency to seven Negroes who are awaiting electrocution for raping a 32-year-old Martinsville white woman.

A hearing on the petitions for clemency was held by the Governor on July 7. Today's action apparently ended any further chance the seven might have to escape the electric chair.

Joe Henry Hampton, Frank Hairston, jr., Booker T. Millner, and Howard Hairston are scheduled to die on July 28, and Francis Desales Grayson, John Clabon Taylor and James Luther Hairston on August 4.

In declining to commute the death sentences to life in prison, the governor reviewed the circumstances surrounding the crimes and the subsequent legal developments arising from the attack on Mrs. Ruby Stroud Floyd. He said in a three-page statement:

"I am mindful of the grave responsibility placed upon me, and I have searched the records and my own conscience without finding any circumstances upon which I could rely in setting aside the findings of the courts in any of these cases. I have no course, therefore, other than to deny the prayer of the petition."

Area Has Two New Polio Cases

Two new polio cases were reported in Greater Washington yesterday, bringing the year's total to 50.

Both cases at first were believed to be District residents, but a later check showed one Washington case and one from Prince Georges County.

The Washington case, the twenty-sixth this year, is of a seven-year-old boy from the 500 block of Florida ave. ne. This time last year there were 12 Washington cases.

The Prince Georges case is of an 11-year-old girl, of the 5900 block of Foote st. ne. Both children are under treatment at Children's Hospital.

Meet Shouse of WLW-TV

Wrestling Matches Staged in TV Studio

By Tex McCrary and Jinx Falkenburg

CINCINNATI—This was our first check point on a ten-city tour of the country, quizzing leaders and editors about American thinking west of the Hudson. As the site of the Voice of America's most powerful transmitting plant, and as the traditional stronghold of isolationists, Cincinnati has a double significance. We asked Jim Shouse pointblank: "How do Cincinnatians feel now?"

A former Democrat turned Republican, he answered bluntly: "Isolationists, the America Firsters, were strong here before Pearl Harbor. No matter how you may interpret Senator Taft's ideas, I do not believe that isolationism has ever been reborn in Ohio."

Son of a Kentucky dentist, Jim Shouse knows Ohio "the doorbell way"—as a student in the University of Cincinnati, he was assigned to a project of door-to-door market research for Liberty magazine. Dayton was his territory.

Increase In Set Owners

THE INCREASE in TV set owners in Cincinnati has been double the rate for the Nation. WLW-TV can boast of Standing Room Only for sponsors this summer, usually a quiet period; programming will start at 7:30 a. m. in September, and continue until an hour past midnight. Most newsworthy to sports promoters is this unpublicized venture:

"We put on our own wrestling matches, through professional promoters, for an invited studio audience—lighting and camera positions are perfect, sponsors are happy, promoters and wrestlers are happy. At WLW-TV, we are one step nearer Tex Rickard's prediction that someday championship fights would be staged in a hotel room, with nobody present but a referee and seconds, and the world will listen in on the radio. Only one thing wrong with that prophecy—there will be a studio audience, and the world will watch as well as listen, on TV!"

Shouse got into radio the hard way: in Chicago, as a salesman for CBS, in the days when NBC was miles ahead. He put Ben Bernie and Wayne King on the air for the first time, and he vividly remembers the saying around Chicago: "The only NBC salesman that Jim Shouse can't outsell is Niles Trammell."

Most Prosperous

STATION WLW, most prosperous independent in America, was built by Powell Crosley. Crosley still owns the Cincinnati Reds, Crosley Field, and assorted enterprises. But WLW has been sold to AVCO, American Aviation Corp., New York. Jim Shouse, who lives in Cincinnati, spends one day each week in New York, as a vice president and director of AVCO. He is convinced that New York City's biggest industry these days is "the production of rumors. Even worse than Washington! I mean it.

"I bumped into an important man who had just had dinner with President Truman—I asked him how things looked. He said he didn't know anything. I told him a joke Niles Trammell had heard from the NBC correspondent in Tokyo—apparently the newsmen out there were laughing and saying the whole Korea thing was all MacArthur's idea . . . he ordered the Air Force into Korea and Truman had to tag along. Just a joke.

An hour later, I ran into a Canadian industrialist and he was very excited, said he had just seen this same man, who had just had dinner with President Truman the night before, and President Truman was angry because General MacArthur had started the whole thing in Korea!

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Now, 'The Story Behind The News' About Bill Shadel

"Shop Talk," house organ for WTOP and The Washington Post, this week carries an item that begins:

"A surprise marriage was that of WTOP'S newsman Bill Shadel and fashion model Julie Mehlman."

"Shop Talk" can act surprised if it wants to, but the announcement didn't exactly catch me flat-flooted. In an indirect sort of way, I played Cupid in that match.

Some time ago, when I was doing a program on WTOP, I invited Julie to come up one day to tell our listeners all about the fashion modeling business.

Shadel, loafing around the news room between broadcasts, took one look at my guest and went down like a ton of bricks. "Introduce me," he hissed. So I did. And then I couldn't get a word in edgewise until the program started.

While I interviewed Julie, Shadel sat in the control room, chin cupped in his hands, looking at her through the plate glass as I look at a $3 steak. He was a gone goose, right from the start.

So, as I say, the word "surprise" in connection with that marriage seems a bit out of place. The only thing that surprises me is that it took Shadel so long to get around to marrying the girl.

APPROPRIATE?

GIVE-AWAYS

"Four assorted abandoned kittens, about 6 weeks old." (North 2245 after 6 p. m.)

"Black-and-white female, part-cocker; her barking annoys our neighbors." (Columbia 2785.)

"Housebroken 4-month-old kitten." (North 8588.)

"Three beautiful, house-trained male kittens, 10 weeks old." (Oliver 5827.)

SHE MADE IT

Mrs. James R. Parker, jr., of 2503 Arundel rd., Mount Rainier, Md., asks whether wev'e seen the jingle:

"A woman is a rag, a bone, a hank of hair . . . A man is a brag, a groan, a tank of air."

She adds: I had a previous item published under the name of Elaine Charland, 2901 Allison st., Mount Rainier. Does this second item qualify me for active membership in the District Line Club?"

Definitely. It confuses the club's record a bit, but we don't mind. We think marriage is a wonderful institution. When young couples set up a home of their own, we pick up an extra subscriber.

HOORAY FOR HIM

A salesman in a local store gets my nomination as our first home-front hero of this war. Unfortunately, I can't identify him too closely without getting him fired.

His employer sells a luxury line that women could easily do without if they had to. There's a huge supply available, and no danger of a shortage unless the fighting lasts indefinitely.

But the owner of the store has printed up thousands of postcards bearing the scare message: "Hurry, order now, while stocks are still available. We don't know when we'll get another shipment."

Each salesman has been given a stack of these cards to mail out to his regular customers.

The gentleman I single out for commendation "mailed" his cards in the waste basket. He says: "The reason we don't know when we'll get another shipment is that we have a basement full of stock, and won't reorder for some time."

WELL, IDA-CLARE

The other day we had a little jingle in which Mary Ellen offered to bet her best hat that Ida Jean Kain, the diet lady, is the kind who can eat hot buttered doughnuts and never get fat.

The paper had no sooner been delivered to Ida Jean's home in Chevy Chase than she was pounding out this reply:

"Our friend Mary Ellen has lost her best hat . . . for too many calories make anyone fat . . . Where weight is concerned, I'm forced to explain . . . Two weeks' overeating last summer—raised Kain!"

Ida Jean's letter is being forwarded to Mary Ellen, for her scrapbook.

T. R. McKeldin To Run for Md. Governor

Baltimore, July 24 (AP).—Theodore Roosevelt McKeldin, former Mayor of Baltimore, announced today he would run a third time for Governor of Maryland.

He will seek the Republican nomination in the September primaries.

McKeldin's announcement touched off a flurry of excitement in Republican circles because he immediately became the man to beat for the nomination. He is probably the most widely known Republican personality throughout the State.

Two other men have announced so far for the Republican nomination. They are State Senator Roy Tasco Davis of Montgomery County, and D. John Markey, retired Army general from Frederick County who almost won a seat in the United States Senate four years ago.

There were some indications that Senator Davis might withdraw now that McKeldin is in the race. His only comment on the McKeldin announcement was: "I think that's fine. I hope the campaign is so conducted that a Republican will be elected in November, no matter who wins the nomination."

Markey appeared to be in the race to stay.

State Senator Harry T. Phoebus of Somerset County, who has been talking about running for the nomination, has said he would not if McKeldin became a candidate.

Since Senator Davis has the blessing of Jacob France, Republican national committeeman for Maryland, there is a possibility the primary may shape up as a bitter fight between McKeldin and France forces for control of the party organization.

McKeldin lacked about 20,000 votes of making the grade when he first ran for Governor in 1942, against former Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor, now a United States Senator.

Four years later, McKeldin was back in the race again—this time against Governor Lane. He went down by more than 46,000 votes.

Old Print Shop To Be Dedicated At Williamsburg

Williamsburg, Va., July 24 (Spl.) The Colonial printing office—newest detail of eighteenth century life restored in this historic city—will be formally opened to the public here Tuesday afternoon.

Colorful pageantry will mark the ceremonies, which will include addresses by Edwin S. Friendly, vice president of the New York World-Telegram and Sun and president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, and John B. Haggerty, president of the International Allied Printing Trades Council. The program will start at 3 p. m. on the steps of the printing office on Duke of Gloucester st. here.

Reestablished as a typical printing office of pre-Revolutionary days, the quaint shop will become a free exhibition building of Colonial Williamsburg recalling the significant role of early presses in American history and the rich traditions of printing in Virginia. Authentically equipped, it will be the only operating eighteenth century shop in existence.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round — THE WASHINGTON POST, Tuesday, July 25, 1950

Korea Proved Rep. Vinson Right

By Drew Pearson

A significant, off-the-record meeting took place in the office of the Secretary of Defense on the morning President Truman sent his re-armament program to Congress.

Secretary Louis Johnson, who had previously hacked billions from the armament estimates of the joint chiefs of staff, called in his most vigorous opponent, Representative Carl Vinson of Georgia, and said quietly: "I need your help, Congressman. You were right."

Rep. Vinson

Vinson, the powerful chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, replied: "We'll let bygones be bygones, Mr. Secretary. The important thing is that we all work together to get the kind of defense we need to win a war."

When Johnson explained the plans for an enlarged Army, Navy, and Air Force, they were virtually identical to the demands Vinson has been making like a modern Jeremiah ever since the end of World War II.

Set Defense Minimums

A year and a half ago, in defending a joint chief's estimate of $30 billions, Vinson argued that our minimum defense needs were:

Army strength of 711,668; purchase of 673 new skysweeper anti-aircraft guns; modernize 743 medium tanks; put 421,314 army reserves on drill-pay status; build up the Navy to 555,700 officers and enlisted men; restore a $98 million cut in the Navy's maintenance and operation budget; spend $1,030,000,000 for new naval aircraft and $220 million for naval research, and add $800 million to the Air Force to buy 702 more planes.

Absenteeism Derided

Criticism of Senators, rather than Communists in the State Department, caused the big argument inside the Senate Foreign Relations Committee when it considered the McCarthy report.

GOP Senators Henry Lodge of Massachusetts and Bourke Hickenlooper of Iowa yelled loudest about two paragraphs chiding them for absenteeism from the subcommittee.

"This is an outrage," he shouted at Senator Millard Tydings, who drafted the report. "I was legitimately absent. It's unheard of for a senator to be insulted in this fashion."

"Oh, quiet down," Tydings finally shouted back. "I didn't mean to insult anybody. If you want that part out, we'll take it out."

But Tydings pointedly reminded the two dissenters that they couldn't have devoted much time to the subcommitee, since Lodge admitted reading only 19 of the 81 State Department files on employees accused by McCarthy, while Hickenlooper read only nine.

Behind Taft's Attack

There was an amazing story behind Senator Bob Taft's Korean attack on the State Department, in which he demanded that Dean Acheson resign as Secretary of State.

Acheson has long been a close friend of the Ohio isolationist—despite their divergent views of world affairs. So, sometime ago, when Acheson learned that Mrs. Taft was in the hospital, having suffered from a stroke, he sent her flowers, accompanied by a cheerful "get well" note. Senator Taft, in turn, was so pleased by this gesture that he sat down and wrote Acheson a letter in longhand, telling how pleased "Martha" was by his remembrance.

The letter was addressed affectionately "Dear Dean" and was signed, "Bob."
